FOR DECISION

HUMAN RIGHTS MONITORING GROUP REQUESTS FOR INTERVENTIONS

MOTION

2. That Convocation approve the letters and public statements in the following cases:
  - a. lawyer Mahienour El-Massry – Egypt – letters of intervention and public statement presented at TAB 3.1.1;
  - b. lawyer Rashid Rehman – Pakistan - letters of intervention and public statement presented at TAB 3.1.2.

MANDATE OF THE HUMAN RIGHTS MONITORING GROUP

3. The mandate of the Human Rights Monitoring Group is,
  - a. to review information that comes to its attention about human rights violations that target members of the profession and the judiciary, here and abroad, as a result of the discharge of their legitimate professional duties;
  - b. to determine if the matter is one that requires a response from the Law Society; and,
  - c. to prepare a response for review and approval by Convocation.
4. The mandate further states that where Convocation's meeting schedule makes such a review and approval impractical, the Treasurer may review such responses in Convocation's place and take such steps as he or she deems appropriate. In such instances, the Human Rights Monitoring Group shall report on the matters at the next meeting of Convocation.

5. On September 20, 2007, Convocation expanded the mandate by adopting the following recommendation: That the Monitoring Group explore the possibility of developing a network of organizations, and work collaboratively with them, to address human rights violations against judges and lawyers.

EGYPT – DETENTION AND SENTENCING OF MAHIENOUR EL-MASSRY

SOURCES OF INFORMATION

  - b. The Daily News Egypt;<sup>2</sup>
  - c. Cairo Institute for Human Rights Studies;<sup>3</sup> and
  - d. International Federation for Human Rights.<sup>4</sup>

BACKGROUND

7. On May 20, 2014, the Sidi Gaber Misdemeanour Court in Alexandria, Egypt rejected the objection filed by Manhienour El-Massry, a human rights lawyer, regarding the sentence issued against her in absentia on January 2, 2014, convicting her to two years imprisonment and a fine of EGP 50,000 (approximately $7,609 CAD).<sup>5</sup> She was

1 The Observatory for the Protection of Human Rights Defenders is a joint International Federation of Human Rights (“FIDH”) and World Organization Against Torture (“OMCT”) program created in 1997. This unique collaboration is based on the complementarily approach of each organization and is based on their respective non-governmental organization (“NGO”) networks. One of the main objectives is to focus the international community’s attention on cases of harassment and repression of human rights defenders.

2 The Daily News Egypt is an independent English language daily newspaper established in 2005. The former owner was Egyptian Media Services. It was distributed with the International Herald Tribune as a supplement. In June 2012, The Business News for Press, Publishing and Distribution Company announced it would begin publishing a newspaper under the name Daily Egypt news. The paper claims to be independent and free from government censorship.

3 Cairo Institute for Human Rights Studies was founded in 1993 and is an independent regional non-governmental organization which aims to promote respect for the principles of human rights and democracy in the Arab region.

4 International Federation of Human Rights (FIDH) is an international non-governmental organization defending all civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, set out in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Based in France, the FIDH is a non-partisan, non-religious, apolitical and non-profit organization.

Manhienour El-Massry and seven other members of the political group “Revolutionary Socialists”, including human rights lawyer Hassan Mustafa, were charged after they organized a protest on December 2, 2013. The protest was related to Khaled Saeed’s murder retrial. Khaled Saeed became a symbol of police repression during the 2011 Egyptian Revolution when he was killed by police forces on June 6, 2012.<sup>7</sup>

THE MONITORING GROUP’S CONSIDERATION

9. The Monitoring Group considered the following when making a decision about the case:
  - a. There are no concerns about the quality of sources used for this report.
  - b. The arrest, detention and conviction of lawyers as a result of their human rights work falls within the mandate of the Monitoring Group. The Law Society has intervened in Egypt in the past where lawyers were being persecuted for representing clients accused of crimes against the state, terrorism and members of minority groups. Additional past interventions also include cases where lawyers were targeted for their human rights work and protesting.

BACKGROUND

11. On May 7, 2014, Rashid Rehman, a 53-year-old lawyer, was killed by two unidentified gunmen who walked into his office and shot him. He was shot five times. His colleague, Nadeem Parvaz and a client, Fazal Baloch were also shot and injured.<sup>11</sup> The gunmen escaped. The shooting follows a number of death threats directed at Rashid Rehman for representing a university lecturer and Fulbright scholar, Junaid Hafeez, who is charged with blasphemy. One of the death threats was made on April 9, 2012 in the Multan Central Prison courtroom in front of Judge Shahbaz Ali Paracha, who made no comment even after Rashid Rehman drew his attention to them. Rashid Rehman reported the death threats to the Punjab Chief Minister, the Inspector General of Punjab Police, the Multan City Police and the district Bar Association. However, no action was taken to protect Rashid Rehman.<sup>12</sup>
12. Rashid Rehman was a prominent human rights lawyer in Pakistan and the Regional Coordinator for the Human Rights Commission of Pakistan (“HRCP”) in the Punjab province. He headed the HRCP’s special task force office in Multan. He had been an advocate against Pakistan’s blasphemy laws and worked for religious freedom and also represented religious minorities.

9 Lawyers’ Rights Watch Canada (“LRWC”) is a committee of Canadian lawyers who promote human rights and the rule of law by providing support internationally to human rights defenders in danger. LRWC promotes the implementation and enforcement of international standards designed to protect the independence and security of human rights defenders around the world. It began in 2000 and is run by volunteers and funded by sole membership fees and donations from individuals.

10 World Organization Against Torture (“OMCT”) was created in 1985 to fight torture, summary executions, enforced disappearances and all other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. Its focus is the protection and promotion of human rights. It is an international non-governmental organization based in Geneva with 311 affiliated organizations within its network. The OMCT enjoys a consultative status with the following institutions: ECOSOC (United Nations), the International Labour Organization, the African Commission on Human and Peoples’ Rights, the Organisation Internationale de la Francophonie, and the Council of Europe.

13. Rashid Rehman was the only lawyer Juanid Hafeez's father could find to defend his son. Juanid Hafeez's first lawyer, who represented him during his bail hearing withdrew after being threatened by extremist religious groups.<sup>13</sup> Charges against Juanid Hafeez stem from an allegation made in 2013 by a student associated with Islami Jamiat Talaba, a wing of the hard-line Jammat-i-Isami party.<sup>14</sup> The student accused Juanid Hafeez, a poet and a popular lecturer in the English Department at Bahauddin Zakariya University in Multan, of "insulting the Prophet Muhammad on Facebook". No evidence supporting the student's claim was produced. The police registered the case as blasphemy. However, they did not request cybercrime specialists to investigate and relied on a fatwa issued by a seminary.
14. The current blasphemy laws flow from a set of colonial laws that criminalized "insulting the religion of any class of persons" and were updated in the 1980s by General Muhammad Zia ul-Haq. The laws were originally established in the 19th century by the British government in an attempt to keep their subjects from different religious backgrounds from fighting each other. General Zia's amendments criminalized "the desecration of the Quran, any defiling of the name of the Prophet Muhammad, and disrespectful remarks about his companions" and "any attempt by members of the outlawed Ahmadi sect to refer to themselves as Muslims". Apparently, the updated blasphemy laws were meant to target Pakistan's Shiite minority. Those convicted of blasphemy may be executed or given a sentence of life imprisonment. Recently, the laws were expanded to include any criticism of the blasphemy laws themselves. In mid-May 2014, Punjabi police brought blasphemy charges against 68 lawyers.

President of the Arab Republic of Egypt
Abedine Palace
Cairo
Egypt

Dear President Mansour:

Re: The Detention and Sentencing of Manhienour El-Massry

I write on behalf of the Law Society of Upper Canada* to voice our grave concern over the detention and sentencing of human rights lawyer Manhienour El-Massry. When serious issues of apparent injustice to lawyers and the judiciary come to our attention, we speak out.

On May 20, 2014, the Sidi Gaber Misdemeanour Court in Alexandria rejected the objection filed by Manhienour El-Massry, a human rights lawyer, regarding the sentence issued against her in absentia on January 2, 2014. The court convicted her to two years imprisonment and a fine of EGP 50,000. She was sentenced for “protest without a permit” and “assaulting security forces”. Manhienour El-Massry and seven others, including human rights lawyer Hassan Mustafa, were charged after they organized a protest on December 2, 2013. The protest was related to Khaled Saeed murder’s retrial.

The Law Society is deeply concerned about situations where lawyers are targeted in the legitimate exercise of their duties. International human rights instruments, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights state that respect for human rights is essential to advancing the rule of law. Article 16 of the United Nations Basic Principles on the Role of Lawyers states “governments shall ensure that lawyers are able to perform all of their professional functions without intimidation, hindrance, harassment or improper interference; are able to travel and to consult with their clients freely; and shall not suffer, or be threatened with, prosecution or administrative, economic or other sanctions for any action taken in accordance with recognized professional duties, standards and ethics”. Article 18 states “lawyers shall not be identified with their clients or their clients’ causes as a result of discharging their functions”.

The Law Society urges the government of Egypt to,

- a. guarantee all the procedural rights that should be accorded to Mahienour El-Massry and other human rights defenders in Egypt;
- b. guarantee in all circumstances the physical and psychological integrity of Mahienour El-Massry;

- c. put an end to all acts of harassment against Mahienour El-Massry and other human rights defenders in Egypt;
- d. ensure that all lawyers can carry out their peaceful and legitimate activities without fear of physical violence or other human rights violations; and
- e. ensure in all circumstances respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms in accordance with international human rights standards and international instruments.

Re: Arbitrary Detention and Sentencing of Human Rights Lawyer Mahienour El-Massry

The Law Society of Upper Canada is the governing body for more than 46,000 lawyers and 6,300 paralegals in the province of Ontario, Canada. The Law Society is committed to preserving the rule of law and to the maintenance of an independent Bar. Due to this commitment, the Law Society established a Human Rights Monitoring Group (“Monitoring Group”). Your Excellency President Hussain:

Re: The Murder of Human Rights Lawyer Rashid Rehman

I write on behalf of the Law Society of Upper Canada* to voice our grave concern over the murder of human rights lawyer Rashid Rehman. When serious issues of apparent injustice to lawyers and the judiciary come to our attention, we speak out.

On May 7, 2014, Rashid Rehman, a prominent human rights lawyer and the Regional Coordinator for the Human Rights Commission of Pakistan ("HRCP"), was murdered in his office by two unidentified gunmen. The shooting and his death follow a number of death threats he received in connection to his work on behalf of Juanid Hafeez, a university lecturer and poet.

Rashid Rehman reported the death threats to the Punjab Chief Minister, the Inspector General of Punjab Police, the Multan City Police and the district Bar Association. However, no action was taken to protect Rashid Rehman. The murder of Rashid Rehman raises the issue of the safety of human rights lawyers in Pakistan, especially those who represent people charged under the blasphemy laws.

Protecting the lives as well as the personal and professional safety of lawyers in Pakistan is integral to ensuring all people in Pakistan have access to legal services and to justice. When lawyers have reported death threats to government officials, there is a duty to investigate and protect those lawyers who have been threatened.

The Law Society is deeply concerned about situations where lawyers are targeted in the legitimate exercise of their duties. Dear Chairman Butt,

Re: The Murder of Human Rights Lawyer Rashid Rehman

The Law Society of Upper Canada is the governing body for more than 46,000 lawyers and 6,300 paralegals in the province of Ontario, Canada. The Law Society is committed to preserving the rule of law and to the maintenance of an independent Bar. Due to this commitment, the Law Society established a Human Rights Monitoring Group ("Monitoring Group"). The Monitoring Group has a mandate to review information of human rights violations targeting, as a result of the discharge of their legitimate professional duties, members of the legal profession and the judiciary, in Canada and abroad. The Human Rights Monitoring Group reviews such information and determines if a response is required of the Law Society.

I write to inform you that on the advice of the Human Rights Monitoring Group, the Law Society of Upper Canada has sent the attached letter to the Pakistani government expressing our deep concerns over the murder of human rights lawyer Rashid Rehman.

In view of the fact that your organization represents the interests of lawyers in Pakistan, we would value the opportunity to communicate with you in regard to what problems, if any, lawyers may be experiencing in Pakistan.

If you are willing and able to do so, we would be very interested in hearing from you concerning the situation noted in the attached letter. In particular, if we have any of the facts in the case wrong, it would assist us in our work to know that.

Please forward any further correspondence to the attention of Josée Bouchard, Equity Director, Law Society of Upper Canada, 130 Queen St. West, Toronto, Ontario, Canada, M5H 2N6 or to jbouchar@lsuc.on.ca.

I thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

TAB 3.2

FOR INFORMATION

DEVELOPMENT OF AN ABORIGINAL STRATEGY

16. In February 2013, Justice Iacobucci released the First Nations Representation on Ontario Juries report, following a 2-year long independent review. He described the justice system as applied to First Nations as being in a state of crisis requiring immediate attention and action from the key stakeholders and decision-makers in the justice sector. In response to the report, the Ministry of the Attorney General sponsored the creation of an Implementation Committee and an Advisory Committee and, more recently, has approved the creation of the position of Assistant Deputy Attorney General, Aboriginal Justice. This report was previously presented to the Committee and is available on-line at http://www.attorneygeneral.jus.gov.on.ca/english/about/pubs/iacobucci/pdf/First\_Nations\_Representation\_Ontario\_Juries.pdf
17. In September 2013, the Treasurer opened Convocation with a smudging ceremony for the Law Society eagle feathers. Originally, these feathers were presented by Ojibway elder, Peter Kelly (Tobasonakwut Kinew), to Treasurer Strosberg in 1998. As part of the opening in September, lawyer Diane Kelly, Peter Kelly's daughter, spoke to the fact that the feathers symbolize connection and the relationship between the Law Society and the Aboriginal community. Their presence also places a responsibility on the people present to communicate in a respectful way with each other. Since September, the feathers have been present in Convocation at the meeting table. Since 2008, the feathers have been used at Law Society events, including the public legal education events for National Aboriginal History Month and the Call to the Bar ceremonies.
18. In November 2013, the Nishnawbe Aski Nation (NAN) and Nishnawbe Aski Legal Services Corporation hosted the NAN Wide Justice Summit. The conference was well-attended and included representatives from almost all of the NAN communities as well as representatives from the Aboriginal police, the regional Crown law offices, the private bar, the judiciary, the Ministry of the Attorney General, Legal Aid Ontario and the Law

Society. The final report of the conference was released in April 2014 and is available at <http://www.nanlegal.on.ca/article/11-237.asp>

19. In February 2014, the Law Society approved the final report of the working group on the Treasurer's Advisory Group on Access to Justice, now renamed The Action Group on Access to Justice (TAG). The report outlined a framework for the development of an access to justice strategy for the Law Society, which envisioned the development of an integrated Aboriginal Strategy.
20. In light of the above-mentioned developments, the Committee discussed on June 12, 2014, how to build on its Aboriginal strategy. In updating its strategy, the Committee relied on the Law Society's Aboriginal Bar Consultation report, received by Convocation on January 29, 2009. The report is available at <http://www.lsuc.on.ca/with.aspx?id=2147487014>. The Committee also considered a progress report, available at TAB 3.2.1.
21. The Committee discussed moving forward with a two-pronged approach that would address the needs of Aboriginal lawyers and paralegals, and also the Aboriginal community. The following approaches were discussed:
  - a. to develop and implement a methodology for the second phase of the consultation with Aboriginal lawyers and paralegals that led to the 2009 Consultation report;
  - b. to consider developing an effective process for engaging in dialogue with Aboriginal lawyers and paralegals;
  - c. to enhance awareness in the Aboriginal community about the Law Society complaints process (3rd party complaints filing);
  - d. to develop an Aboriginal strategy that focuses on the needs of Aboriginal legal service consumers from the point of view of their access to the services of the Law Society and to legal services in general, and also in terms of ensuring their full access to justice;
  - e. to consider gathering Law Society data regarding the extent to which Aboriginal people access Law Society services. In light of the "Iacobucci" Report on Aboriginal Justice, particular attention should be given to gathering data regarding the experience of First Nations people in Northern Ontario reserve communities.

22. As part of its approach to building on the existing strategy, the Law Society is consulting with external stakeholders beginning with a roundtable discussion with Aboriginal lawyers and paralegals on June 19, 2014. The purpose of the roundtable is to review the progress of implementation for the 2009 Aboriginal Bar Consultation report and to receive feedback on potential options for updating the Law Society's Aboriginal Initiatives Strategy.

PARENTAL LEAVE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM ("PLAP") – ADDITIONAL STATISTICAL INFORMATION

23. The Equity Committee presented an Information Report to Convocation in February 2014 that included statistical information about PLAP and a proposed assessment methodology of the means test. Members of Convocation requested further information, more specifically data about how many men and women PLAP recipients returned to practice.
24. The Equity Committee presents further statistical data about the PLAP program at TAB 3.2.2. In addition to the statistical information, the Law Society will conduct telephone interviews with each PLAP recipient under the means test. The PLAP interview questionnaire is available at TAB 3.2.3.

JUSTICIA PROJECT – OVERVIEW AND NEXT STEPS

25. The Equity Committee presents an overview of the Justicia symposium and the next steps in the Justicia project at TAB 3.2.4.

HUMAN RIGHTS MONITORING GROUP REPORT *FACILITATING INTERNATIONAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE THROUGH INTERVENTION

26. The Human Rights Monitoring Group presents a report of its interventions since its inception. The report provides an overview of its work from an access to justice perspective, by outlining the types of clients that those lawyers serve. Lawyers who are persecuted by authorities are often advocates for human rights. They also represent vulnerable clients who have no other access to legal services. Judges are also included in this report. Most often presiding judges who are persecuted in the course of their duties focus on facilitating access to justice by advocating for an independent judiciary and promoting the rule of law.
27. The report, presented at TAB 3.2.5 is divided as follows:
  - a. Mandate of the Monitoring Group;
  - b. United Nations' focus on access to justice;
  - c. An overview of access to justice trends internationally in relation to the Law Society's interventions;
  - d. International human rights advocates expanding access to justice; and,
  - e. Response to our interventions.

CHALLENGES FACED BY RACIALIZED LICENSEES PROJECT - UPDATE

28. In August 2012, Convocation created the Challenges Faced by Racialized Licensees Working Group (the Working Group).
29. The Working Group held informal meetings with individual and organizational stakeholders and formal consultations with the paralegal and lawyer professions. The formal consultations included key informant interviews, focus groups and a survey of the profession as a whole.

30. The Working Group will continue its work over the summer and will report back to Convocation in the fall.

PROGRESS REPORT:
IMPLEMENTATION OF THE ABORIGINAL BAR CONSULTATION REPORT (2009)

Summary of Aboriginal Initiatives Strategy and Report Implementation Status

Following the release of the Aboriginal Bar Consultation Report in 2009, the Law Society confirmed its Aboriginal Initiatives strategy as well as four proposals for action to implement that strategy.

Since 2009, the guiding principle of the Aboriginal Initiatives strategy has been the development of policy and implementation of programs designed to enhance access to and retention of Aboriginal lawyers in the legal profession in Ontario. As more Aboriginal paralegals have begun to enter the profession and have self-identified through the Paralegal Licensing process, the strategy has begun to adapt to include their participation.

The following summarizes the four proposals for action for implementing the Aboriginal Initiatives strategy, as they were stated in the Aboriginal Bar Consultation Report (the "2009 Report"), and their current development status:

Proposal for Action 1: "Expanding the Members' Annual Report (MAR) practice categories to include Aboriginal Law."

Current Status: Implemented in the 2009 Lawyer Annual Report (LAR) and included in ongoing LAR.

Proposal for Action 2: "[C]ontinued support and development of mentoring and networking programs for Aboriginal law students, Licensing candidates and lawyers".

Current Status: Expanded as of 2009 and currently ongoing.

Proposal for Action 3: "[D]evelopment of a CLE (Continuing Legal Education) course in Aboriginal law and issues for lawyers/paralegals who provide legal services to Aboriginal clientele".

Current Status: Initiated in 2011 and currently ongoing.

Proposal for Action 4: "[C]ontinued support of the Law Society for the development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law and/or practice".

Current Status: As of May 2014, the development process is underway through the Professional Development and Competence department. Anticipated completion is late 2015.

Background

On January 29, 2009, Convocation received the final report of the Aboriginal Bar Consultation project (the "2009 Report") as an information item. This report, which outlines the purpose, methodology as well as the results of the consultation, is available on the Law Society website at <http://rc.lsuc.on.ca/pdf/equity/aboriginalBarConsultation.pdf>.

The Aboriginal Bar Consultation Project was identified as a priority project by the Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee and was initiated in 2006. Throughout the project, the Committee relied on the advice of the Aboriginal Working Group (AWG), an external advisory group consisting of approximately 30 Aboriginal lawyers from throughout Ontario. Bencher Susan Hare is the chair of the AWG.

The research was carried out by staff in the Equity Initiatives Department with the assistance of Strategic Counsel in developing the survey instrument and the AWG as an advisory body and a roster of participants in the project.

Outcomes of the Aboriginal Bar Consultation Project

Prior to the release of the 2009 Report, the Law Society had limited access to quantitative information about Aboriginal lawyers in Ontario. The main available source of data was the self-identification information collected through the registration process for the Lawyer and Paralegal Licensing programs. Demographic data has been collected on a volunteer basis from Licensing program applicants since 2000. This information was the foundation for the creation of a contact database for recently called Aboriginal lawyers in Ontario. Through the Aboriginal Bar Consultation project, the Equity Initiatives department was able to build a comprehensive contact database that includes both established and recently called lawyers in Ontario as well as a demographic profile of the Aboriginal bar. As of 2013, there are close to 500 self-identifying Aboriginal lawyers and 60 self-identifying Aboriginal paralegals licensed in Ontario.

In addition, the report confirmed the Law Society's Aboriginal Initiatives strategy and identified four proposals for action to implement the strategy. Specifically, the guiding principle of the strategy is the development of policy and implementation of programs designed to enhance access to and retention of Aboriginal lawyers in the legal profession in Ontario. As more Aboriginal paralegals have begun to enter the profession and have self-identified through the Paralegal Licensing process, the strategy has begun to adapt to include their participation.

The Aboriginal Bar Consultation Report proposals have provided the key components of the work plan for the Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee and the Aboriginal Initiatives Counsel from 2009 to the present. A detailed summary of the proposals for action and their current development status is provided below.

Detailed Status of Proposals for Action

1. Expand the Lawyer Annual Report (LAR) practice categories to include Aboriginal Law

Following the introduction of the regulation of paralegals, the name of the annual report filed by members was changed to Lawyer Annual Report (LAR) and Paralegal Annual Report (PAR).

Aboriginal Law was added as a practice category in the mandatory section for the 2009 LAR. According to data results for the 2009, 2010, 2011 and 2012 LAR reports, there were 653, 731, 774, and 792 lawyers, respectively, who reported that they practised somewhere between 1% and 100% of their practice in Aboriginal law in Ontario. These results apply to Ontario lawyers in both private practice and the public sector as well as in all practice environments. For the 2013 LAR, the results of which were available in early 2014, 810 lawyers identified that they practice Aboriginal Law.

These reports have been used to establish a contact database for the promotion of Aboriginal Initiatives programming, including the Equity Public Legal Education events and Aboriginal Law Career Symposium programs.

2. Continue support and development of mentoring and networking programs for Aboriginal law students, Licensing candidates and lawyers

Programs for Law Students and Licensing Candidates

Below is a summary of the existing Law Society support programs for Aboriginal law students and Licensing candidates.

Aboriginal Law Career Symposium

The Aboriginal Law Career Symposium program has been an annual event since 2004. Bencher Susan Hare has participated in these events as moderator since 2007. The symposium events are held at the faculties of law at the University of Ottawa (since 2004) and University of Windsor (since 2008) as well as the Law Society (since 2004). For 2014, the event was also hosted at the faculty of law at Lakehead University, which launched its inaugural class in September 2013.

The format of the event is a 2-hour roundtable discussion on a practice or professionalism topic related to the practice of Aboriginal law and/or the provision of legal services to Aboriginal people. Since 2011, these programs have been CPD-accredited for professionalism hours.

Equity Initiatives staff work with the appropriate law school staff to promote the programs. Law students and Lawyer and Paralegal Licensing candidates are invited to attend. Specific focus is paid to encouraging Aboriginal students and those law students who are specifically interested in practising in this area. Local Aboriginal lawyers and, more recently, paralegals are invited in order to provide an opportunity for the law students and Licensing candidates to interact with practitioners in the field.

Because of its location at the Law Society, the Toronto event has featured a networking reception since it started. Starting in 2011, the Ottawa and Windsor programs were expanded to include a networking reception. Feedback on the discussions and receptions is consistently positive, particularly from student participants. According to anecdotal responses from students and lawyers, connections leading to summer and articling positions have started at the Symposium events.

Licensing Candidate Support Program

The Law Society offers a Licensing Candidate support program, referred to as the Elders Program. This program has changed formats over the years as the Licensing program has changed. When the Licensing Program included an in-class component for the Skills and Professional Responsibility program (up to 2009), in-person orientation sessions were held in June at the course sites, Ryerson University and the University of Ottawa. Once the Licensing program transitioned to a self-study program, the Elders program was adapted to focus on establishing and maintaining communication through email.

Notwithstanding program changes, the main components of the program have remained the same and include the following:

- Access to local community Elders on an as-requested basis by Licensing candidates;
- Access to a contact list of Aboriginal lawyers from throughout Ontario who expressed interest in communicating with and mentoring Aboriginal Licensing candidates;
- Inclusion in the Aboriginal Initiatives' email-list to receive information about community events, employment opportunities and events offered through the Aboriginal Initiatives program;
- Access to the Aboriginal Initiatives Counsel for information and referrals with regard to the Licensing program; and
- An invitation to be acknowledged by a community Elder at the candidates' Call to the Bar ceremony.

In addition, starting in 2010, a LinkedIn group, "Canadian Aboriginal law students and lawyers" was established. LinkedIn is recognized as an effective social networking site in the professional setting. Through this group, lawyers and law students have the option of communicating directly with each. Currently, there are 190 members of this group.

A table outlining the participation numbers for the Aboriginal Law Career Symposium events as well as Licensing Program orientation events since 2009 is provided at Appendix 1. In considering the participation rates, the following changes are notable:

- The numbers of student participants at Ottawa and Windsor have increased sharply since 2013
- Paralegal Licensing candidate participants attended at the Toronto event in 2014 for the first time.

Networking Receptions – Formal and Informal

In 2009, following the release of the Aboriginal Bar Consultation report, a schedule of networking events to promote the Aboriginal Bar Consultation report was developed. Bencher Susan Hare has acted as chair for the majority of the formal networking receptions. Invited participants have included Aboriginal law students, lawyers, paralegals and judges, as well as non-Aboriginal law students in the case of the Aboriginal Law Career Symposium receptions.

Tables summarizing the formal and informal networking events that have been hosted by the Law Society since 2009 are provided in Appendix 2. In considering the listing of networking events, the events are differentiated as formal or informal. Formal events are those that are promoted as “networking” or “mentoring” receptions and are part of the regular programming of the Law Society. Informal events are primarily those that arise as a result of an external request for Law Society support for an event or occasion. In both cases, invitations are extended to local Aboriginal law students, lawyers, paralegals and Licensing candidates.

3. Develop a Continuing Professional Development (CPD) course in Aboriginal law and issues for lawyers/paralegals who provide legal services to Aboriginal clientele

Background

The Law Society Continuing Professional Development Requirement

At the time the 2009 Report was released, lawyers voluntarily reported on their annual Continuing Legal Education (CLE) activities. Since January 1, 2011, the Law Society has instituted a mandatory Continuing Professional Development (CPD) requirement for all lawyers and licensed paralegals. Under this CPD requirement, lawyers and licensed paralegals are required to complete 12 hours of CPD annually, including 3 hours in programs accredited for Professionalism and Practice Management.

The Equity Initiatives Department’s Equity Public Legal Education Series

The Equity Initiatives department hosts an annual Equity Public Legal Education (“Equity PLE”) program at the Law Society. This program consists of approximately 12 free-of-charge PLE events that coincide with national and international days of recognition and celebration. The Equity Initiatives department works in partnership with community and legal professional associations to create events that highlight legal issues that are relevant to equity-seeking communities in Ontario. The events are recorded and the archived videos are available through the Law Society website.

The format for each event is similar: a 2-hour panel discussion on a topical legal issue followed by a reception. The panelists include legal, academic, community and political leaders. A reception will typically follow the panel discussion. On average, between 100 and 150 people attend the events in person in Toronto.

Two of the Equity PLE events focus specifically on Aboriginal issues. Each June since 1999 there has been an event to celebrate National Aboriginal History Month (formerly recognized as National Aboriginal Day). Each November 16 since 2003 (with the exception of 2008), there has been an Equity PLE event to recognize Louis Riel Day.

The National Aboriginal History Month events are organized with a variety of partners from the Aboriginal cultural as well as legal community. Previous partners have included Aboriginal Legal Services Toronto, the Aboriginal Law Section of the Ontario Bar Association, and the Indian Residential Schools Adjudication Secretariat. For 2014, the community partner is the Chiefs of Ontario. Since 2011, the National Aboriginal History Month events have focused their panel discussions on specific legal issues and have been CPD-accredited programs.

The Louis Riel Day events are hosted in partnership with the Métis Nation of Ontario (MNO). The Law Society event is scheduled as the last in a series of community events held throughout Toronto each year. The MNO's focus for the Law Society event is to provide information to both community members as well as the legal professions. For this reason, the MNO opts not to structure the program to qualify for accreditation for professionalism hours, but rather to focus on the historical and substantive legal issues that impact the Métis community broadly. Lawyer and paralegal participants may opt to claim substantive hour credits for attending the Louis Riel panel discussion. On average, between 80 and 120 people attend.

A listing of the free CPD-accredited programs offered through the Aboriginal Initiatives Program since 2011 is provided at Appendix 3. In considering the listing, the following should be noted:

- Attendance at the National Aboriginal History Month (NAHM) Equity PLE event was consistent between 2005 and 2011. On average, between 80 and 120 participants attended. Since 2011, when the NAHM was first accredited as a CPD program, attendance increased and the make-up of the audience has shifted from largely Aboriginal community members and members of the public to lawyers and, increasingly, paralegals.
- The inclusion of live webcasting as a feature of the NAHM program in 2013, resulted in a slight decrease in the number of in-person participants although overall participation numbers were higher. The location of webcasting participants was split almost evenly between local participants and those from outside the GTA.

4. Continued support of the Law Society for the development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law and/or practice

Background

The Law Society's Certified Specialist program is designed to help lawyers achieve recognition as leaders in their field<sup>1</sup>. The program enables lawyers to acquire the requisite skills and knowledge to qualify for certification as a specialist in a given practice area. Full details about the program are available at <http://rc.lsuc.on.ca/jsp/csp/index.jsp> and in a video at <http://www.lsuc.on.ca/with.aspx?id=2147491420>.

The 2009 Report identified the development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law as a "future priority". Participants expressed support for this proposal but were also cognizant of potential challenges for the development process, including the breadth of this area of practice. In supporting this proposal, "[r]espondents generally agreed that more consultation and cooperation between the Law Society and the profession, in particular the Indigenous Bar Association and Aboriginal lawyers as well as the community, is [sic] required before a certified specialty could be created."

Approval Process for Development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law

The inclusion of Aboriginal Law as a category of practice in the Lawyers Annual Report (LAR) provided the quantitative data required to establish the potential market should a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law and/or Practice become available in Ontario.

This practice category was introduced with the 2009 LAR. As noted above, between the 2009 and 2013 LAR, the number of lawyers reporting that they practised Aboriginal law as a percentage of their practice, ranging from 1 per cent to 100 per cent, increased from 653 to 810 lawyers.

Between 2009 and 2013, awareness of this proposal for action was consistently promoted through distribution of the 2009 Report at the Aboriginal Law Career Symposium, Equity PLE events for National Aboriginal History Month and Louis Riel Day as well as external outreach opportunities undertaken by staff and bencher Susan Hare.

As part of taking concrete steps to determine the potential demand for a Certified Specialist program in this practice area, in January 2013, emails were sent out on behalf of bencher Susan Hare to the following groups:

- Members of the Aboriginal Working Group;

<sup>1</sup> Excerpted from the Law Society website, 'About the Certified Specialist Program' webpage at <http://www.lsuc.on.ca/For-Lawyers/About-Your-Licence/About-the-Certified-Specialist-Program/>.

- Lawyers included in the Equity Initiatives department's Aboriginal lawyers contact database; and
- Lawyers who had reported that they practised Aboriginal Law in their 2011 LAR (as available in 2012).

Approximately 900 emails were sent out to these groups, with some overlap between the Aboriginal lawyer group and the Aboriginal law practitioners groups. The email requested that the lawyer consider whether he or she would support the development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law and whether he or she would be willing to participate in an advisory capacity through the process.

As of March 27, 2013, 58 letters and emails of endorsement were received from Ontario lawyers. Of those, 9 respondents endorsed the development of this proposal and 49 provided their endorsement as well as their willingness to participate in the development process for the proposal and/or apply to the program should it be approved.

The request for approval of development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law was referred to the Certified Specialist Board for its consideration at its May 30, 2013 meeting. The Board approved the proposal and planning for development was initiated by Professional Development and Competence staff.

As of May 2014, the following steps have been initiated in relation to the development of this initiative:

- February 2014 - Aboriginal Law practitioners were retained to prepare first draft working copies of experience requirements for specialist certification in and learning criteria for the new specialty area.
- April 2014 – A working group of 8 Aboriginal Law practitioners with established experience in the specialty area and from varied jurisdictions, practice areas and practice environments was struck. The group met for the first time to begin development of a definition for the specialty area, sub-specialties, the experience component of the standards for certification, and learning criteria. The group was provided with sample standards from other specialty areas as well as the first-draft working copy of Aboriginal Law experience requirements and learning criteria.

At its first meeting the working group established a broad proposed scheme for subdividing the specialty area into sub-specialties. Development of experience requirements for each sub-specialty and a definition for the new specialty area is in progress. The working group will meet throughout 2014 to continue development of the new specialty area.

A second working group will be struck in 2015 to begin the validation stage of the development of the standards. It is anticipated that the development process could be completed in late 2015.

Other Services Available to Aboriginal Lawyers, Paralegals and the Public

In addition to implementing the proposals for action of the 2009 Report, the Law Society provides and is also developing programs and services to support Aboriginal lawyers, paralegals and the Aboriginal public specifically. A summary of these existing and developing resources is provided below.

Existing Resources

Guidelines for Lawyers Acting in Aboriginal Residential School Cases

These guidelines are available on the Law Society website at <http://www.lsuc.on.ca/with.aspx?id=2147487058>. They are intended to assist lawyers who act for claimants in cases involving Indian Residential Schools, including claims which may be commenced or are already proceeding through legal processes established by the May 8, 2006 Indian Residential Schools Settlement Agreement. Convocation passed similar Practice Guidelines in October 2003. The current version was approved by Convocation at its meeting in February 2012.

The Guidelines highlight a number of issues specific to representation of Aboriginal residential school abuse claimants and the professional conduct expectations for lawyers, with appropriate references to the Rules of Professional Conduct.

Adaptation of the Law Society Complaints Process for Indian Residential School Survivors

As of June 2013, the Law Society's Professional Regulation Division adapted its complaints process so as to meet the needs of members of First Nations communities, in particular the survivors of the Indian Residential Schools. This adaptation arose out of communication initiated by the Chief and Deputy Chief Adjudicators of the Indian Residential Schools Adjudication Secretariat (the "Secretariat") with the Director of the Professional Regulation Division around areas of concern with regard to services of counsel to survivor applicants in the Independent Assessment Process (IAP).

The adapted process allows for the Secretariat to file a complaint on behalf of a survivor with the Deputy Chief Adjudicator as the primary contact. The Director has designated specific Law Society staff for the intake, complaints resolution, investigation and prosecution components of the Law Society's complaints process. Specialized training is planned for Division staff in 2014.

Resources in Development

The release of the "First Nations Representation on Ontario Juries" report (the "Iacobucci Report")<sup>2</sup> in February 2013 highlighted the barriers facing Aboriginal people in Ontario, in particular in the North and the Nishnawbe-Aski Nation (NAN) region, in participating in the jury process and also in accessing legal information and services. Recommendation 4 of the report referred specifically to the issue of the adequacy of legal representation for First Nations people in the North.<sup>3</sup>

Subsequently, in November 2013, the Law Society participated in the NAN-Wide Justice Summit on a panel discussing "Legal Representation in the North". The report of the conference<sup>4</sup> also highlights the challenges faced by NAN members in accessing legal services and information.

Conclusion

As outlined in this progress report, the 2009 Report's 4 proposals for action have all been initiated. In the cases of proposal 1, the inclusion of Aboriginal law as a practice category in the LAR, and proposal 4, the development of a Certified Specialist program in Aboriginal Law, the proposals are fully implemented and well along the process of being fully implemented, respectively.

In considering proposal 2, the continuation of support and development of mentoring and networking programs for Aboriginal law students, Licensing candidates and lawyers, there remain opportunities to further explore and improve on existing programs.

Formalization of mentoring for Aboriginal law students, Licensing candidates and lawyers is a timely option for consideration. Additionally, advancing the integration of Aboriginal paralegals within the mentoring and networking program is another timely option.

In 2013, Convocation struck a Mentoring and Advisory Services Proposal Task Force. Among other tasks, this benchers task force will study and seek feedback on the relative success of various approaches to mentoring. Contemplation of mentoring as it applies to students, Licensing candidates, lawyers and paralegals from equity-seeking communities, including Aboriginal individuals, will inform the work of this task force. Future recommendations from this task force will influence the development of Law Society mentoring initiatives.

(a) a study on legal representation that would involve Legal Aid Ontario, particularly in the north, that would cover a variety of topics, including the adequacy of existing legal representation, the location and schedule of court sittings, and related matters."

Similarly, in considering Proposal 3, the development of a CPD course in Aboriginal law and issues for lawyers or paralegals who provide legal services to Aboriginal clientele, there remain opportunities to explore options.

There are a number of external service providers who host and charge fees for CPD-accredited programs in Aboriginal law topics. The Law Society partnered with the Aboriginal Law Section of the Ontario Bar Association to co-host a two-part program on Aboriginal economic development in June and November 2011. For the November event, the OBA charged participants between $210 and $310 per person. Consistent attendance numbers at the free Equity PLE events has demonstrated that a demand for CPD courses in Aboriginal issues, particularly those that are accredited for professionalism, exists. Determining whether demand exists for a Law Society CPD-accredited program that carries a fee and, more particularly, options for content of such a program could be explored.

Law Society CPD programming in Aboriginal law and practice issues has focused on the legal services of lawyers. Exploring CPD opportunities for paralegals who provide legal services in Aboriginal law and/or for Aboriginal clients is another option.

Proposal for Action 2: Continue support and development of mentoring and networking programs for Aboriginal law students, Licensing candidates and lawyers

The following table shows the participation numbers for the Aboriginal Law Career Symposium events since 2009. The table indicates that in Toronto, the events attract on average 17 lawyers, paralegals or judges and 11 students or Licensing candidates each year. At the University of Windsor, on average 4 lawyers and 6 students participate each year. At the University of Ottawa, on average 7 lawyers and 10 students participate. The Law Society held its first event in Lakehead in 2014 with 8 lawyers and 18 students participating.

Analysis of Law Society Data – Parental Leave Assistance Program (PLAP)

Executive Summary

1. The following tables provide an overview of statistical information about the PLAP since its inception in March 2009 until January 31, 2014.
2. The data show that a large proportion of recipients of PLAP benefits return to practice following their leave (88% of men and 79% of women). Only 2% of men and 12% of women were considered retired or in abeyance as of January 31, 2014. Of the 12% of women who were retired in the Law Society database, 7% were still within the one year leave of absence and may well return to practice.
3. The data indicate that most female recipients received the full three months of benefits (92%) while 67% of men received the full three months.
4. Eight-two percent (82%) of male recipients remained in the same status category, as sole practitioners or partners, before and after having received PLAP benefits, while 71% of women remained in the same status category as sole practitioners or partners.
5. Lawyers from across the province have benefited from the PLAP program.

Total recipients since inception: 240
24 women and 8 men received PLAP benefits for more than one leave –

Interview Questionnaire (2014-15) REVIEW OF THE PARENTAL LEAVE ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

INTERVIEW QUESTIONS

This interview questionnaire is for lawyers who began receiving PLAP benefits after January 1, 2014 and whose benefit period has ended. The interview results will be used to assess the effectiveness of PLAP since the means test was added and will form the basis of the recommendations to Convocation to continue the current PLAP, modify the existing PLAP, or discontinue PLAP. Findings will be reported in aggregate form without attribution. Your assistance is greatly appreciated.

What was your work status when you applied for PLAP benefits?

- Sole practitioner
- Partner in a small firm
- Independent contractor
- Other: please specify

When was your child born/came into your care for adoption?

How long did you plan to be away from practice?

How helpful was the PLAP program to you?

What did you use PLAP for?

- Overhead (rent, telephone, internet, salary of assistant, etc.)
- Pay a replacement lawyer
- Income replacement
- Other: please specify

How important a factor was PLAP in enabling you to take a leave and return to practice? On a range from not satisfied (1) to very satisfied (10)

What impact did PLAP have on your leave?

- Allowed me to take a longer leave
- Allowed me to keep my practice open during the leave
- Other: please specify

What would you have done if PLAP were not available?

Did it assist you in keeping your practice open?

How did you offer services to your clients during your leave?

- By another lawyer in my firm
- By a contract lawyer
- Hearing dates were deferred
- Other: please specify

How well do you feel your clients were served during your leave? On a range from not satisfied (1) to very satisfied (10)

Have you returned, or are you planning to return, to practice in a small firm or as a sole practitioner?

Did (or will) your practice change after your return? If so, how and why?

	Before Leave	After Leave
Main areas of law
Working arrangements (e.g. joined or left a firm)
Time commitment (full-time, part-time)
Billable hours per week (approx.)
Client base (e.g. businesses, not-for-profits, low-income or disadvantaged groups)
% of clients that are low or middle income (less than $75,000 per household)
% of practice that is legal aid
Location (urban/rural)

Did you take advantage of the Law Society's Career Coaching Program to provide up to six hours of free coaching to women in small firms? If so, how helpful was the coaching before, during or after your leave? If not, why not?

Did you take advantage of the Law Society's Contract Registry to find a replacement while you were on leave? If so, how helpful was the replacement? If not, why not?

Why did you not take advantage of the EI Special Benefits Program instead of PLAP?

- I did not know they existed
- I determined that it was not cost effective to become eligible for EI benefits
- PLAP paid superior benefits than EI
- Other: please specify

What was your experience with the application process? On a range from not satisfied (1) to very satisfied (10)

Do you have suggestions on how to improve the application process?

Do you wish to make any further comments about the PLAP program?

FOR INFORMATION
JUSTICIA PROJECT – OVERVIEW AND NEXT STEPS

BACKGROUND

1. The Law Society's Justicia Project continues to lead the way in the retention and advancement of women lawyers in private practice in Ontario. Launched in November 2008, Justicia is the first project of its kind in Canada and has grown to include 57 participating law firms across the province, with one out-of-province firm.
2. Justicia firms worked together over the last five years to develop templates to track gender demographics and to identify and adopt principles and best practices regarding flexible work arrangements, networking and business development, and mentoring and leadership skills development for women. Justicia partners throughout Ontario developed 13 templates, guides and toolkits to help retain and advance women lawyers in private practice.
3. Several other provincial law societies are following Ontario's lead. More than 75 law firms across Canada — 15 national and 60 regional — have joined or are about to make a long-term commitment to Justicia
4. On May 28, 2014, the Law Society held its Justicia Symposium, which included workshops to focus on the retention and advancement of women and to celebrate Justicia founding firms. The symposium offered numerous workshops on leadership and mentorship skills, flexible work arrangements, leaves, advancing into partnership — and more.
5. Approximately 200 lawyers and paralegals attended the workshops in person and approximately 350 via webcast. The event also provided an opportunity for the official release of the Justicia Project resources to the profession and public. The resources are available at http://www.lsuc.on.ca/justicia\_project/.

6. Following the symposium, reception keynote speaker The Honourable Annemarie E. Bonkalo, Chief Justice of the Ontario Court of Justice, talked about the challenges and triumphs related to the retention and advancement of women in private practice. Approximately 150 individuals attended the reception, including members of the judiciary, managing partners, firm representatives, representatives of the Law Society of Alberta and the Barreau du Québec and members of the bar and the public.

MOVING FORWARD

7. The Justicia Project will continue to lead the way to the retention and advancement of women in private practice. For example, the Law Society will continue to promote the Justicia materials on its website, in its written materials, in CPD programs, in social media and at suitable events. The communications plan continues to be updated to identify opportunities to keep Justicia materials in the public eye.
8. The Law Society intends on continuing to meet with the Justicia law firms every two years to look at updating and ensuring the relevance of the Justicia materials.
9. Justicia has received national attention and has now been adopted by the Law Society of British Columbia, the Law Society of Alberta, the Law Society of Saskatchewan, the Law Society of Manitoba and the Barreau du Québec. The Law Society of Upper Canada will continue to work together with these law societies to ensure that Justicia is successful in their provinces.
10. The Law Society of Upper Canada will continue to collect data on women and men leaving private practice and will continue to monitor progress. The Law Society has recently completed a third survey with the Justicia law firms. It is anticipated that a report outlining the findings of the three surveys and the progress made through Justicia will be presented to Convocation in the fall. The Law Society will also continue to survey lawyers about their movements in the profession through the Change of Status survey and to survey firms on their policies and practices.

11. The Law Society currently analyzes the data from the Lawyer and Paralegal Annual Reports in order to create snapshots of the profession. This practice will also continue.
12. The Law Society will report to Convocation on the change of status of women and men and the self-identification data collected from the Lawyer and Paralegal Annual Reports at least every three years and will continue to monitor statistics, and commit to advising the firms that participated about this information, as well as publishing it on the website.
13. Through the Justicia Project, the Law Society, with the assistance of the firm representatives, has created templates for law firms to deliver continuing professional development programs on leadership, business development and career advancement. The Law Society will continue to promote and share the information in the Justicia resources through these CPD programs
14. The Law Society's work to retain and advance women in private practice also extends beyond the Justicia project. The Law Society will continue to provide support to sole practitioners and women in small firms through the Career Coaching Program, the Parental Leave Assistance Program, the Contract Lawyers' Registry and the Women's Online Resource Centre. Information about these initiatives is available on the Law Society's website.
15. Through the resources developed and changes initiated through Justicia, and the additional Retention of Women in Private initiatives, it is believed that the Law Society can continue to positively influence cultural change in the profession.

Responses to the Law Society's Interventions.....	75

BACKGROUND

“Nothing is more important than justice and the just society. It is essential to flourishing of men, women and children and to maintaining social stability and security. You need only open your newspaper to the international section to read about countries where the rule of law does not prevail, where the justice system is failing or non-existent.”<sup>1</sup>

— Right Honourable Beverley McLachlin, P.C.
Chief Justice Supreme Court of Canada

1. Basic human rights cannot be guaranteed by law in the absence of the rule of law. They are interdependent and bound together by justice. Safeguarding these rights requires vigilant advocates both at home and abroad. Only through an independent legal profession where lawyers and judges perform their legitimate professional duties without undue or illegal interference can human rights and the rule of law prevail.
2. Unfortunately, lawyers and judges around the world working to uphold the rule of law and defend human rights work under threat of not only professional sanctions, but also threats to personal safety. Yet, they continue their work to ensure that their communities can access justice, advance their legal rights and that right might prevail.
3. The Law Society has a duty to maintain and advance the cause of justice and the rule of law. Central to advancing both the cause of justice and the rule of law is ensuring access to justice for all.
4. While the Law Society Act<sup>2</sup> provides that the Law Society facilitate access to justice for Ontarians, the Law Society's commitment to access to justice issues not only focuses on a provincial level, but extends to the international community.

5. This report provides an overview of the Human Rights Monitoring Group (the "Monitoring Group") work over the years, from an access to justice perspective, by outlining the types of clients that those lawyers serve. Lawyers who are persecuted by authorities are often advocates for human rights. They also represent vulnerable clients who have no other access to legal services. Judges are also included this report. Most often presiding judges who are persecuted in the course of their duties focus on facilitating access to justice by advocating for an independent judiciary and promoting the rule of law.
6. This report is divided as follows:
  - a. Mandate of the Monitoring Group;
  - b. United Nations' focus on access to justice;
  - c. An overview of access to justice trends internationally in relation to the Law Society's interventions;
  - d. International human rights advocates expanding access to justice; and,
  - e. Response to our interventions.

MANDATE OF THE MONITORING GROUP

7. In light of the Law Society's mandate to uphold the rule of law and facilitate access to justice, Convocation approved in March 2006, a policy "to systematically respond to the human rights violations that target members of the legal profession and judiciary in retribution for the discharge of their legitimate professional duties, and; that a group of benchers be charged with monitoring human rights violations that target members of the legal profession and judiciary in retribution for the discharge of their legitimate professional duties."<sup>3</sup> The policy was based on a report of a working group chaired by bencher Paul Copeland and the initiative was championed by bencher Heather Ross through the Emerging Issues Committee.

8. The mandate of the Monitoring Group approved by Convocation is to,
  - a. review information that comes to its attention about human rights violations that target members of the profession and the judiciary, here and abroad, as a result of the discharge of their legitimate professional duties;
  - b. determine if the matter is one that requires a response from the Law Society; and,
  - c. prepare a response for review and approval by Convocation.

9. The Monitoring Group is also mandated to explore the possibility of developing a network of organizations, and work collaboratively with them, to address human rights violations against judges and lawyers.

UNITED NATIONS' FOCUS ON ACCESS TO JUSTICE

10. The United Nations Development Program ("UNDP") has stated that "[i]n the absence of access to justice, people are unable to have their voice heard, exercise their rights, challenge discrimination or hold decision-makers accountable."<sup>4</sup>

11. Globally, there is an increasing focus on access to justice issues. Without access to justice the larger movement towards eradicating poverty, promoting equality, increasing educational outcomes, ensuring environmental sustainability, improving health by combating HIV/AIDS, malaria and other diseases suffer. These are just a few of the United Nations Millennium Development Goals. International human rights standards are integral in protecting vulnerable populations such as women, persons with disabilities and minorities.<sup>5</sup>

12. Although the UNDP's report, Strengthening Judicial Integrity through Enhanced Access to Justice, focused on access to justice issues for women, persons with disabilities and minorities, they observed a number of factors barred vulnerable persons and groups from accessing justice. These factors ranged from “discrimination, poverty, low institutional trust or confidence in the process, lack of capacity, language barriers, weak access to information, or living in remote areas with a lack of judicial facilities.”<sup>6</sup>

OVERVIEW OF ACCESS TO JUSTICE TRENDS – INTERNATIONALLY

13. We reviewed the Law Society’s more than 75 interventions on behalf of members of the legal profession and the judiciary from September 2007 to June 2014. Our findings show a trend – clients of persecuted lawyers are most often vulnerable with very limited access to legal representation and cases involving judges often challenge corruption or advocate for the rule of law.

14. Most lawyers in the more than 70 cases that involved the profession were persecuted, harassed, imprisoned and in some cases killed for their work in the following areas:
  - a. representing clients from religious and ethnic minority communities or vulnerable clients due to their socioeconomic, gender or ethnic situation;
  - b. challenging government actions on behalf of groups or human rights organizations;
  - c. defending clients involved in politically charged cases; and,
  - d. advocating for prisoners of conscience who were imprisoned for exercising their democratic rights.

15. In the few cases involving judges, the judges were,
  - a. advocating for judicial independence;
  - b. promoting the rule of law; and,
  - c. challenging corruption.

16. We have categorized the cases as best we could, even though some cases would fall under more than one rubric. The following outlines the cases based on the categories listed above.

Representing Clients from Religious and Ethnic Minority Communities and Vulnerable Clients Due to their Socioeconomic, Gender or Ethnic Status

17. There are numerous examples of lawyers, for whom the Law Society has intervened, who represented clients who are vulnerable because of their socioeconomic, gender or ethnic status. In some cases, clients from minority religious or ethnic communities are unable to secure legal representation.

China

18. The Law Society has intervened on numerous occasions in cases where lawyers are being persecuted while carrying out their legal duties in China. A number of these cases involved clients who, because of their poverty, ethnic or religious status, would not be represented.

Gao Zhisheng

19. In 2006, 2007 and 2014, the Law Society has intervened on behalf of Gao Zhisheng who is known for many things, but primarily for defending activists, religious minorities and documenting human rights abuses in China. For example, Gao Zhisheng has provided legal help for Falun Gong practitioners, including Huang Wei, who was illegally sentenced to three years of re-education through labor in Shijiazhuang. He has also provided legal help for an illegal Chinese house church pastor, Cai Zhuohua, who was sentenced to three years in prison for printing and distributing copies of the Bible.<sup>7</sup>

---

<sup>7</sup> Law Society of Upper Canada, "Zhisheng Letters of Intervention and Public Statements" (October 2006, May 2007 and April 2014).

20. In addition, Gao Zhisheng has, over the years, focused his legal practice on advocating for the most vulnerable. He has advocated for fair compensation for a client whose home was expropriated for a building project connected to the Summer 2008 Olympics. He took on a land dispute case against Taishi village officials and also a class-action lawsuit against local authorities over coercion in implementation of China's family planning policies. He won a case for six factory workers from Guangdong province who were detained for protesting exploitation by their employer. He also worked to defend the right to free expression by appealing the sentence of Zheng Yichun, a journalist and former professor who was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in September for his on-line writings.<sup>8</sup>
21. Gao Zhisheng was imprisoned in the Shaya County Prison in a remote part of the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region in northwestern China. His brother asked for permission to visit him, but was denied by officials after traveling to the prison on January 10, 2012. Gao Zhisheng's wife, Geng He, was told by officials that he was undergoing a "three month period of education". On March 2012, his brother and father-in-law were permitted to visit and confirmed he was being held in the Shaya County Prison. Ten months later, on January 12, 2013, unidentified family members were permitted to visit Gao Zhisheng for a second time.
22. Gao Zhisheng was scheduled for release on August 22, 2013, but has again disappeared. In February 2014, his wife, Geng He, who lives with their children in the United States, testified in front of the United Nations Working Group on Enforced and Involuntary Disappearance. Her submissions highlighted that they do not know if Gao Zhisheng is alive.

Chen Guangcheng

23. In 2006, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Chen Guangchen, a human rights lawyer who is known for advocating for women's rights, land rights and the welfare of the poor. Chen Guangcheng is one of China's most prominent human rights defenders. He organized a landmark class action suit against authorities in Linyi, Shangdong province for the excessive enforcement of the one-child policy.<sup>9</sup>

Ni Yulan

24. In 2013, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Ni Yulan, an outspoken human rights lawyer and activist. For many in China, the preparation for the 2008 Olympic Games brought about mass evictions and illegal demolitions. Since 2001, much of Ni Yulan's legal practice centered on defending persons who were forcibly evicted from their homes by housing developers across China.<sup>10</sup> Ni Yulan has been beaten, imprisoned, harassed and threatened.
25. Many not only lost their homes through illegal expropriations or demolitions, but were never compensated.<sup>11</sup> Her advocacy gave voice to those people unable to challenge developers and authorities.

Lawyers Providing Legal Aid

26. Finally, in 2008 the Law Society intervened in favour of Chinese lawyers providing voluntary legal aid to the victims of contaminated milk powder products. On September 11, 2008, the first toxic milk powder case became public. Contaminated milk powder products placed over 50,000 infants at risk of contracting kidney stones and four children died. The powdered milk was tainted with melamine, a chemical used in making plastics.<sup>12</sup>
27. By September 24, 2008, about 124 lawyers offered pro bono legal services to the victims. Lawyers and law firms providing legal aid were intimidated and warned by Chinese authorities to not take these cases. At least two dozen lawyers withdrew their services following governmental pressure. Without legal representation many victims would be unable to seek justice for their children.<sup>13</sup>

Honduras

28. The Law Society has intervened in Honduras in cases where lawyers were harassed, intimidated or murdered while representing their clients' interests. One of the vulnerable client groups involved are disadvantaged labourers.

Dionisio Diaz Garcia

29. In 2007, the Law Society expressed its concern over the assassination of labour and human rights lawyer, Dionisio Diaz Garcia. He worked as the lead labour lawyer for the Association for a More Just Society ("AMJS"). While working for the AMJS's Labour Rights for Vulnerable Populations program, Dionisio Diaz Garcia discovered routine labour violations in areas where security guards were employed by private security firms. In December 2006, two men pulled up alongside him as he walked to court and shot him.<sup>14</sup> His assassination followed a two-year public trial.<sup>15</sup>

Iran

30. The Law Society has intervened in Iran in numerous cases where the lawyers representing clients who are journalists, human rights activists or women were imprisoned or harassed for providing legal services.

Farshid Yadoollahi and Imprisoned Human Rights Lawyers

31. Farshid Yadoollahi is a human rights lawyer who is known for representing dervishes and is also a member of the administration of the Majzooban.org, a community news website for Gonabadi Sufis. His arrest, in late 2011, is related to his successful representation of dervishes, who are Sufi Muslims and choose to live in poverty. They are a religious minority in Iran. He is currently serving seven and a half years in prison based on his representation of religious minorities.

<sup>15</sup> Law Society of Upper Canada, Report to Convocation, by Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee (Toronto: Law Society of Upper Canada, 27 January 2011) at 19 – 20.

32. Farshid Yadollahi along with four other lawyers and over 60 Sufis were arrested en mass. His arrest is seen as part of an ongoing campaign by Iranian authorities to harass lawyers representing dervishes.
33. Until recently, Farshid Yadollahi was serving his sentence in Iran's Evin prison. In March 2014, he was illegally transferred from the Evin prison to the Rajai-Shahr prison, west of Tehran. This transfer is considered to be an additional punishment. Prisoners in Rajai-Shahr prison have reported heavy-handed harassment. The illegal transfer of Farshid Yadollahi and the lack of medical treatment for imprisoned human rights lawyers, like him, along with other prisoners of conscience, have prompted protests.
34. In early March, Iranian protestors marched and called for access to medical treatment for imprisoned human rights defenders. Over Gonabadi 300 male and 26 female dervishes, who protested, were beaten, arrested on March 8th and 9th and later released.
35. The lack of medical treatment for imprisoned human rights lawyers is receiving increased attention in Iran. Several prisoners of conscience detained in Evin prison wrote an open letter to the head of the Iranian Judiciary to draw attention to the lack of medical treatment and facilities for sick prisoners. In the letter, the prisoners state that politically motivated judicial interference by Judge Salavati was responsible for the lack of access to medical treatment.
36. In July 2013, Judge Salavati ordered that Farshid Yadollahi not be transported outside the Evin Prison for much needed dental treatment. The judge also placed a condition on dervish community members being transferred outside of the prison for medical treatment which includes that they wear their prisoner uniforms and remain shackled.<sup>16</sup>

Houtan Kian

37. In 2010, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Houtan Kian, a human rights lawyer. He represented Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani, a 43 year old Iranian woman who was charged and convicted of adultery. She was sentenced to death by stoning. After international pressure, her death sentence was commuted to hanging. Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani's first lawyer, who represented her pro bono, was intimidated and exiled leaving her without legal representation.<sup>17</sup> Afterwards, Houtan Kian took her case and ensured she had legal representation.
38. On October 10, 2010, Houtan Kian and two journalists who were looking to interview Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani's son were arrested. Houtan Kian was detained by Iranian officials on the suspicion of having involvement with anti-revolutionary groups abroad and forging/duplicating identity cards. His arrest and detention were an attempt to keep him from fulfilling his duties as Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani's defence council.<sup>18</sup>

Iran's Endangered Lawyers

39. At the end of 2010, The Law Society received nine separate requests to intervene on behalf of Iranian lawyers who were harassed, arrested and imprisoned. Both the intervention requests and reports pointed to a change in Iran's treatment of lawyers after the June 2009 presidential election. The cases showed signs of a systemic approach by the government towards singling out and persecuting lawyers based on their advocacy in helping their clients access the judicial system.
40. The lawyers' client cases ranged from defending women sentenced to death to representing journalists and women's rights activists. More than 90 lawyers have been sentenced to prison terms ranging from six months to 15 years or death as a result of performing their professional duties.

Maryam Karbasi, Maryam Kianersi and Sara (Hajar) Sabaghian

41. On November 12, 2010, three women human rights lawyers, Maryam Karbasi, Maryam Kianersi and Sara (Hajar) Sabaghian, were arrested at the Tehran airport. These three lawyers were known for defending journalists, bloggers and youths. They were also known for defending women who were sentenced to death. The arrest of all three women followed the publication of an open letter they signed calling for the release of fellow lawyer Nasrin Sotoudeh from prison.<sup>19</sup>

Shadi Sadr

42. Shadi Sadr is a prominent Iranian lawyer who has a long history of being intimidated by Iranian authorities for her advocacy on behalf of women. She co-founded a women's rights organization called Zanan-e Iran (Women of Iran) and launched several campaigns, including the "Stop Stoning Forever" campaign.

43. Shadi Sadr has been arrested twice for her advocacy on behalf of women and women's rights. She represented a number of women's rights activists and a journalist who were given death sentences. She also represented Shiva Nazar Ahari a human rights defender and member of the Committee of Human Rights Reporters. In July 2009, she was detained for 11 days by Iranian authorities. After her release, she fled Iran. Shadi Sadr was tried in absentia and sentenced to 6 years imprisonment and 74 lashes. Today, she still lives in exile.<sup>20</sup>

Nasrin Sotoudeh

44. Nasrin Sotoudeh was sentenced to a total of 11 years in prison and banned from both practicing law and leaving Iran for 20 years. She was given three concurrent sentences. Five years imprisonment for "acting against national security", another five years for “not wearing a hijab during a videotaped message” and another year for “propaganda against the regime.”<sup>21</sup>

Malaysia

Hindraf Lawyers

45. In June 2008, the Law Society intervened in Malaysia on behalf of lawyers whose clients were part of the Indian minority. Malaysian lawyers P. Uthayakumar, M. Manoharan, R. Kenghadharan and V. Ganabati Rao provide legal counsel for the Hindu Rights Action Force (“Hindraf”). Hindraf is a coalition of various Hindu non-governmental organizations committed to preserving and defending the rights of Malaysia’s Hindu community. Hindraf emerged in response to the encroachment of Sharia based laws, demolition of Hindu temples and shrines and the alienation of the Hindu community in Malaysia.<sup>22</sup>
46. Hindraf’s lawyers’ advocacy on behalf of the Indian community resulted in harassment, arrest and detention. M. Manoharan was elected to the Selangor State Assembly, but Malaysian authorities barred him from taking his seat. On October 30, 2007, P. Uthayakumar and V. Ganabati Rao were arrested and detained for organizing and participating in demonstrations against the demolition of a Hindu shrine in Kuala Lumpur. They were charged with sedition and incitement, but were released due to a lack of evidence. After organizing further peaceful demonstrations, P. Uthayakumar and V. Ganabati Rao were once again arrested on November 23, 2007 and charged under the Sedition Act.<sup>23</sup>
47. On December 11, 2007, they were eventually released since the prosecutors could not prove that they had indeed incited racial hatred. The next day, the Malaysian Prime Minister, Abdullah Ahmad Badawi, signed detention letters allowing Malaysian authorities to detain all four of the Hindraf lawyers under the provisions of the Internal Security Act. This allowed the government to detain individuals without trial on national security grounds for up to 2 years, after which the government may extend the detention for a further two years. This process can be repeated indefinitely.<sup>24</sup>

48. Following the Prime Minister's authorization, P. Uthayakumar, M. Manoharan, R. Kenghadharan, V. Ganabati Rao and T. Vasanthakumar were arrested in Kuala Lumpur by the Special Branch police officers. Their arrests were grounded in their advocacy work on behalf of minority groups.<sup>25</sup>

Nigeria

Lawyers Providing Legal Services to LGBTI clients

49. In February 2014, the Law Society intervened on behalf of lawyers providing legal services to Nigeria's lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex ("LGBTI") communities. Lawyers serving LGBTI clients and organizations face stigmatization which is creating a chilling effect as fewer lawyers are willing to represent LGBTI persons, who are often marginalized and impoverished.
50. Lawyers working with Nigeria's LGBTI community or representing persons charged under the Same Sex Marriage (Prohibition) Act also may face harassment and arrest. Enacted on January 7, 2014, the Act's provisions prohibit any person or group from providing services to anyone perceived to be homosexual as well as supporting the registration, operation and support of gay clubs, societies, organizations, processions or meetings in Nigeria.
51. From the wording of the Act it appears that Nigerian and international human rights lawyers advocating for Nigeria's LGBTI community, non-governmental organizations and persons who are charged under the Act may also be charged and convicted for providing legal services. The Act limits the LGBTI community's access to justice as increasingly lawyers are frightened that they will be charged under the Act or found guilty by association. By intervening on behalf of lawyers providing legal services to Nigeria's LGBTI communities, the Law Society is lending its voice in support of lawyers helping this vulnerable population access justice.<sup>26</sup>

Saudi Arabia

Abdul Rahaman al-Lahem

52. The Law Society intervened on behalf of Abdul Rahaman al-Lahem in January 2008 after his licence to practice law was confiscated for representing a sexual assault victim.
53. In 2006, a 19 year-old woman, known as "al-Qatif Girl", and her male companion were convicted of "being alone in private with a member of the opposite sex who is not an immediate family member." They were each sentenced to six months in prison and 90 lashes.<sup>27</sup>
54. In mid-2006, the young woman and her male companion were kidnapped. She was gang-raped by seven men. While the men who raped her were convicted of both kidnapping and rape in November 2006, Abdul Rahaman al-Lahem's client and her male companion were also arrested, prosecuted and convicted. The case was appealed. Abdul Rahaman al-Lahem represented her at the court of appeals. The "al-Qatif Girl" garnered national and international media attention and scrutiny.<sup>28</sup>
55. At court, Abdul Rahaman al-Lahem successfully challenged the previous ruling and his client received a revised sentence. However, he was removed from the case and his license was revoked. He also faced a disciplinary hearing on charges he allegedly advertised his services in violation of Saudi regulations. The charges apparently flowed from appearing in the media.<sup>29</sup>

Turkey

Filiz Kalayci

56. In February 2010, the Law Society intervened in Turkey where the lawyers' clients were Turkish prisoners. The lawyers were associated with the Insan Haklari Derneği ("IHD"), a human rights association.
57. The lawyers who are associated with IHD were working on rights violations in prisons and improving prison conditions. They travelled to almost every prison in Turkey and listened to prisoners' complaints. On February 6, 2009, the IHD released its report on the human rights violations in Turkish prisons.<sup>30</sup>
58. Filiz Kalayci, a lawyer and Executive Committee member of the IHD was arrested on May 12, 2009 along with three other human rights lawyers, Hasan Anlar, Halil Ibrahim Vargün and Murat Vargün. All three lawyers are associated with IHD, an organization that denounces human rights violations occurring while individuals are in detention. Two days later, all four lawyers were released. However, the Public Prosecutor appealed the decisions to release the lawyers. On May 25, 2009, a warrant was re-issued for Filiz Kalayci's arrest. She was arrested on May 28, 2009 for "aiding illegal organizations". The other three lawyers were not arrested.<sup>31</sup>
59. The purpose of Filiz Kalayci's of arrest, detention and prosecution was to prevent and punish her lawful and professional advocacy for prisoners' rights.

Vietnam

Bui Thi Kim Thanh

60. In February 2007, the Law Society intervened on behalf of lawyer Bui Thi Kim Thanh, who is known as an outspoken critic of Vietnam's land confiscation policies. Bui Thi Kim Thanh's clients included farmers whose land was expropriated. She also represented the Democratic Party of Vietnam as well as providing pro-bono defence work for low-income and impoverished people.<sup>32</sup>
61. On November 2, 2006, police officials took Bui Thi Kim Thanh to a local psychiatric hospital where two doctors assessed her and found no evidence of mental illness. She was then taken to the Central Psychiatric Hospital in Bien Hoa, Saigon, where she was committed and forcibly confined, after being interrogated by the police. She has also been injected with unknown drugs although there is no medical basis for these injections. The result of the enforced drug treatment is that she cannot speak.<sup>33</sup>
62. Bui Thi Kim Thanh has not been charged with an offence. The authorities offered to release her if she agreed not to talk about her treatment. She refused. As a result she is not allowed to receive visitors.<sup>34</sup>

Challenging Government Actions on Behalf of Groups or Human Rights Organizations

63. Internationally, barriers to access to justice are sometimes the result of government actions, legislation or historical abuses. Many people seeking to access justice look to lawyers or advocacy groups to make their voices heard and seek redress.

Algeria

Amine Sidhoum Abderramane and Hassiba Boumerdesi

64. Accessing legal services in cases involving disappeared persons is difficult as open talk about Algeria's disappeared is heavily discouraged. However, human rights lawyers Amine Sidhoum Abderramane and Hassiba Boumerdesi, working with the SOS Disappeared, took on cases. In February 2007, the Law Society intervened on behalf of these lawyers.
65. Amine Sidhoum Abderramane and Hassiba Boumerdesi represented the families through their work with SOS Disappeared, an Algerian group that represents more than 7,000 people who disappeared during the 1990s in the armed struggle between the government and Islamic groups in Algeria. Disappeared persons often were placed in facilities such as the special interrogation and rape center at the Chateaneuf barracks. In addition to journalists, judges and political opponents, the persons who were disappeared often came from marginalized groups such as religious minorities, women and LGBT persons.<sup>35</sup>
66. Like those who disappeared, the families are a cross section of Algerian society and are often harassed by authorities. According to reports, hundreds of family members line up at the SOS Disappeared office and wait in long lines with pictures of their missing relatives.<sup>36</sup>

Xu Zhiyong

67. Xu Zhiyong is a prominent legal scholar and human rights lawyer who was arrested and tried on criminal charges of "gathering crowds to disrupt public order". He was sentenced to four years in prison. The charges relate to a small scale peaceful street protest by members of the New Citizens' Movement who were calling for educational equality and for government officials to declare their assets.

68. During Xu Zhiyong's trial, the court denied his defence counsel the right to call witnesses. The court also refused to summon prosecution witnesses to prevent Xu Zhiyong's defence counsel and the presiding judges from questioning them. Additionally, Xu Zhiyong was tried separately from his colleagues who were being prosecuted for the same offence. This contravened the Chinese Criminal Procedure Law requirement that persons charged with the same offence be tried jointly. These irregularities during Xu Zhiyong's trial raise questions regarding the fairness and due process of his trial.<sup>37</sup>

Honduras

69. The numbers of lawyers killed for performing their legal duties prompted the Law Society to intervene in Honduras a number of times. According to the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, between 2009 and 2012, 74 lawyers were killed.<sup>38</sup>

Lawyers at Association for a More Just Society ("AMSJ")

70. The Law Society intervened in January 2011 on behalf of the Association for a More Just Society ("AMSJ"). This Honduras based organization is focused on improving access to justice for all sectors of society and working to promote human rights. In 2004, AMSJ began by investigating violations of labour rights by private security firms. Over the years AMSJ's work has expanded to include peace and public security, land rights, labour rights, anti-corruption, youth and family issues.<sup>39</sup>
71. AMSJ Lawyers work under constant threats and intimidation. For example, in December 2006, Dionisio Diaz Garcia, a lawyer with AMSJ, was assassinated. On December 7, 2006, Carlos Hernández, AMSJ President, received a text message threatening his life. That same day, he was pursued by a man on a motorcycle. The constant threats to AMSJ lawyers prompted the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, in 2006, to request the Honduran government take measures to protect AMSJ lawyers such as providing police protection for AMSJ members.<sup>40</sup>

72. On September 21, 2010, a woman who is both a lawyer and AMSJ member (her name was withheld) was in the offices of the Secretary of Labour to look at documents on labour laws that protect cleaners and security guards. She was approached by three different employees who advised her to drop the investigation into security companies due to the existing personal security risk.
73. A month later, on October 19, 2010, the same woman was abducted. Two men forced her into a taxi and barred her from leaving. They questioned her about her work and told her that they were paid to execute her. She was eventually released.
74. Then on November 3, 2010, two armed men on a motorcycle threatened another AMSJ lawyer, advising that the lawyer "Be careful with AMSJ and Transformemos Honduras [a Christian movement that AMSJ supports]." The ongoing harassment and intimidation of AMSJ lawyers is the result of their legal work, investigations of security companies and promotion of labour rights.<sup>41</sup>

Antonio Trejo Cabrera

75. Antonio Trejo Cabrera was a well respected lawyer and pastor. His legal work centered on representing a number of Honduran agrarian groups in disputes with large landowners. For years he had been subject to death threats related to his defense of the land rights of four campesino cooperatives over four farms, San Isidro, San Esteban, La Trinidad, and El Despertar which together form the Authentic Revindicative Campesino Movement of the Aguan (Authentic Peasant Reclamation Movement of Aguan), which is called MARCA.<sup>42</sup>

He constantly faced harassment and death threats because of his work. Antonio Trejo Cabrera was murdered on September 22, 2012. He was officiating at a couple's marriage. When he left to retrieve the marriage certificate, he was shot five times. He died in hospital.<sup>43</sup>

Leitanthem Umakanta Meitei

77. The Law Society intervened in November 2006 on behalf of Leitanthem Umakanta Meitei, a human rights lawyer working in India. Leitanthem Umakanta Meitei is also the Secretary General of the Threatened Indigenous Peoples' Society ("TIPS"). In 2006, he was arrested without a warrant at his home. The police officers seized CDs, books and information on TIPS and the International Labour Organization. He was detained at the Imphal Police Station where he was interrogated and tortured. Throughout his detention, he was denied a lawyer.<sup>44</sup>
78. His arrest stemmed from his involvement in a protest against a bomb attack on a Hindu temple that killed five Hindus and injured over 40 people. Leitanthem Umakanta Meitei was charged with being a member of, and supporting terrorist organisations and accused of maintaining links with the illegal group "Organisation to Save the Revolutionary Movement in Manipur". On August 29, 2005, the Chief Judicial Magistrate ordered his release on bail due to lack of evidence. Charges were eventually dropped. The charges were fabricated. It appears that his torture and detention were linked to his legal work.

Jitman Basnet

79. The Law Society intervened in October 2007 on behalf of Jitman Basnet, a lawyer and journalist. He is an advocate for victims of Nepal's armed conflict and has filed cases on behalf of the victims before Nepal's Supreme Court and the United Nations Human Rights Committee. He is also Secretary General of the Lawyer's Forum on Human Rights ("LAFHUR"), a pro-bono lawyers' network that works on transitional justice and human rights in Nepal.<sup>45</sup>
80. In March 2007, Jitman Basnet published a book entitled 258 Dark Days. The book recounted his experiences while he was detained in army custody. After his release he received threats from members of the military. In the book, he named government soldiers he claimed raped, tortured or unlawfully killed people during Nepal's armed conflict. Starting in August 2007, Jitman Basnet began receiving harassing telephone calls.<sup>46</sup> The callers threatened to kill both him and his wife. The ongoing harassment related to his advocacy and exposure of human rights abuses during Nepal's armed conflict.

Karpal Singh

81. Karpal Singh, a 73 year old human rights lawyer, remarked that the removal of Mohammad Nizar and the Sultan of Perak's appointment of Datuk Seir Dr Zambry Abdul Kadir as the new Menteri Besar, chief executive of Perak's state government, could be questioned in court. The Sultan's appointment was related to the 2009 Constitutional Crisis, which occurred after three Patyakhn Rakyat party members crossed the floor to sit as pro-Barisan Nasional independents. Karpal Singh was responding to media questions about the constitutional crisis during a press conference at his law firm on February 6, 2009. However, his comment was considered seditious and he was charged under Section 4 (1) (b) of the Sedition Act, 1948.

82. On June 2012, the High Court acquitted and discharged Karpal Singh. The prosecution appealed his acquittal. The Court of Appeal granted the appeal on January 20, 2012 and ordered a new trial. The High Court found Karpal Singh guilty of sedition on February 21, 2014. He was then sentenced on March 11, 2014 to pay a fine of RM 4,000. The effect of this sentence meant that Karpal Singh could be disqualified and removed as a member of parliament for answering media questions.<sup>47</sup>

Myanmar

83. Over the years, the Law Society has intervened on behalf of a number of lawyers in Myanmar who have represented individuals and groups in human rights challenges against government actions.

Nyi Niy Htwe and Saw Kyaw Kyaw Min,

84. Human rights lawyers Nyi Niy Htwe and Saw Kyaw Kyaw Min defended 11 young National League for Democracy protesters who were arrested in September 2008 for peacefully marching while wearing t-shirts depicting Daw Aung Sung Suu Kyi to mark her birthday.
85. On October 29, 2008, Nyi Niy Htwe was arrested by the police for his role in defending the 11 youth protesters. The next day, he was sentenced to six months in prison by the Rangoon Northern District Court for "interruption and insulting [a] judiciary proceeding".
86. A warrant for Saw Kyaw Kyaw Min's arrest was issued. However, he failed to appear at the police station on October 30, 2008. Fearing arrest and detention for political reasons, Saw Kyaw Kyaw Min fled Myanmar. However, he was found guilty in absentia for "interruption and insulting [a] judiciary proceeding" and sentenced to six months imprisonment. Saw Kyaw Kyaw Min's license to practice law was revoked due to this criminal conviction.

87. In 2012, Saw Kyaw Kyaw Min sought to have his license reinstated. He was one of 32 lawyers who had their licenses to practice law revoked.

U Aung Thein and U Khin Maung Shein

88. U Aung Thein and U Khin Maung Shein were also arrested following the submission of a written statement of their clients' desire to relinquish their power of attorney. The defendants stated that they no longer had "faith in the judicial processes," and therefore wished to dismiss their lawyers.

89. The court claimed that the lawyers' defendants did not state this and that this was their opinion as lawyers. However, reports showed that the defendants had expressed these wishes orally at the previous hearing, and that the court had then requested it from the lawyers in writing.

90. Both U Aung Thein and U Khin Maung Shein were convicted without a trial, and therefore, were not given the opportunity to defend the charges brought against them.<sup>48</sup>

Lawyers Disbarred

91. In April 2012, the Law Society intervened on behalf of 32 lawyers who have had their licenses revoked following criminal convictions and were seeking to have their licenses reinstated. The use of criminal sanctions and subsequent disbarment of some or all of these lawyers is a tactic used to punish these lawyers for their political activities.<sup>49</sup> Eventually, 11 of the 32 lawyers who were disbarred had their licenses reinstated. The remaining lawyers who had their licenses revoked can apply to be considered for reinstatement.

Sri Lanka

Dr. Nimalka Fernando

92. Dr. Nimalka Fernando is a 59 year old woman, a prominent human rights lawyer and activist. She is the president of the International Movement Against All Forms of Discrimination and Racism ("IMADR"). She has also actively participated in and contributed to the human rights work of the United Nations, including participating in treaty body committee meetings (committees of independent experts to monitor the implementation of treaties) and sessions of the Human Rights Council for over three decades.
93. During a November 4, 2013 radio program titled "The Way the Country is Moving (Rat Yana Atha)", death threats and derogatory comments were directed by callers toward Dr. Nimalka Fernando. The subtitle of the program was "Stoning the Sinner Woman". Most of the callers were men and some identified themselves as retired members of the armed forces.
94. The day before the radio show aired, Dr. Nimalka Fernando had given a television interview. Her interview was related to a larger public debate that was prompted by Dr. Nimalka Fernando calling for the abolition of Sri Lanka's abortion laws, the promotion of safer sex and a more protective reproductive health approach. She had also stated that she objected to the use of the word "prostitution". Her statements were broadcast on the radio program "The Way the Country is Moving (Rat Yana Atha)".
95. Dr. Nimalka Fernando lodged a complaint with the Human Rights Commission of Sri Lanka and the Inspector General of Police. However, this is not the first time she has faced harassment as a result of her human rights work.
96. In March 2012, Dr. Nimalka Fernando, along with three other human rights defenders, was accused of being a traitor and working against the interests of the country to obtain “dollars”. Additionally, the Minister of Public Relations threatened to “break the limbs” of Dr. Nimalka Fernando and three other human rights defenders.<sup>50</sup>

Lawyers Protesting

97. On January 2013, 15 human rights lawyers were arrested. Nine of the lawyers are members of the Progressive Lawyers' Association (“ÇHD”), which is affiliated to the European Association of Lawyers for Democracy and World Human Rights (“ELDH”). The lawyers who were arrested are known for their work in representing persons accused of crimes against the state and terrorism and members of minority groups.
98. Some of the lawyers were released, however nine lawyers were imprisoned and awaiting trial: Güçlü Sevimli (member of the Istanbul Branch - Istanbul Bar Association), Barkın Timtik (member of Istanbul Bar Association), Şükriye Erden (member of Istanbul Bar Association), Naciye Demir (member of Istanbul Bar Association), Nazan Betül Vangölü Kozağaçlı (member of the Ankara Branch - Ankara Bar Association), Taylan Tanay (President of the Istanbul Branch - Istanbul Bar Association), Ebru Timtik (member of Istanbul Bar Association), Günay Dağ (member of Istanbul Bar Association) and Selçuk Kozağaçlı (National President of ÇHD - Ankara Bar Association).
99. The nine imprisoned lawyers were particularly active in working on human rights cases, especially in representing victims of police violence. The lawyers who were arrested were targeted for their human rights work.<sup>51</sup>

Ramazan Demir

100. Ramazan Demir was arrested and charged with “insulting or (...) offending the dignity of a public authority in the performance of his duties” under section 125 of Turkey’s Criminal Code. If convicted, Ramazan Demir could face up to two years in prison. The charges and his arrest stem from his defence of journalists during the Koma Civakên Kurdistan (“KCK”) trials.
101. In 2012, 44 journalists were arrested on terrorist charges and accused of backing the illegal pan-Kurdish umbrella group KCK. Human rights groups consider the prosecution of these journalists to be part of the government’s efforts to curb free speech in Turkey. Ramazan Demir was representing some of the journalists and lawyers arrested and involved in the KCK trials.
102. During his clients’ hearing in Silivri on November 16, 2012, Ramazan Demir rebutted the prosecutor’s allegation that the journalists on trial were not independent journalists. He challenged the capacity of the prosecutor to determine that the journalists were conducting activities that were not “normal” or “independent” journalistic activities and requested the court to call and hear expert testimony on the subject. Six months later, on May 13, 2012, the Special Prosecutor of the 15th Serious Crimes Court filed a complaint against Ramazan Demir regarding his submissions. On September 9, 2013, the Special Prosecutor was authorized by the Ministry of Justice to file an indictment against Ramazan Demir under s. 125 of Turkey’s Criminal Code.
103. In addition to defending journalists, Ramazan Demir is known for mobilizing support in favour of lawyers prosecuted in two mass anti-terrorism trials. Human rights groups view Ramazan Demir’s case as an example of ongoing judicial harassment of lawyers. They anticipate that similar charges and arrests against other defence lawyers involved in the KCK trials will be forthcoming.<sup>52</sup>

Uganda

Lawyers Challenging the Uganda's *Anti-Homosexuality Bill

104. Lawyers and paralegals working with Uganda's lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex ("LGBTI") community are stigmatized. As a result of the government's Anti-Homosexuality Bill there is a chilling effect as lawyers are refusing to represent LGBTI clients because of the fear of persecution.
105. Lawyers working with Uganda's LGBTI community and non-governmental organizations are looking to challenge the constitutionality of the Bill. Recently, a law firm retained by Fox Odoi, West Budama North Member of Parliament, and the Civil Liberties Organisation-Chapter Four, to provide a legal opinion on the constitutionality of the Bill. However, the law firm declined to be named.
106. While the Bill's provisions criminalize homosexuality, it also prohibits Uganda's Parliament from ratifying any international treaties, conventions, protocols, agreements and declarations that are contrary or inconsistent with the provisions of the Bill. This means that the international safeguards currently protecting lawyers may not shield those working on this issue from prosecution and harassment.<sup>53</sup>

Defending Clients Involved in Politically Charged Cases

107. The political climate, negative perceptions or a client's past all play a role in barring clients from receiving adequate legal representation. The more unpopular the client, the harder it is for them to get a fair trial. Lawyers who represent unpopular clients are often targeted for their work.

Bahrain

Mohamed Issa Al Tajer

108. Mohamed Issa Al Tajer provided legal aid to protestors during the Arab Spring. The Law Society first intervened on behalf of Mohamed Issa Al Tajer in May 2011, and then again in September 2012, after learning he was targeted by authorities based on his legal work.
109. Bahrainian authorities are attempting to put pressure on those who provide legal and medical assistance to protesters. Further, the information received suggests that about 600 people, including human rights defenders, political leaders, trade unionists, doctors and paramedics and clerics have been arrested since February 2011.
110. On April 15, 2011, a group of more than 20 masked and armed plain-clothes men, belonging to security forces, burst into Mohamed Issa Al Tajer's home. After searching his house and office, they took computers and mobile phones. He was arrested and taken to an unknown destination.<sup>54</sup>
111. In September 2012, the Law Society intervened again to voice its continued concern over the arbitrary detention of Mohamed Issa Al Tajer from April 14, 2011 to August 6, 2011. During his detention, he was subject to acts of torture and ill-treatment.
112. Mohamed Issa Al Tajer is closely monitored by Bahrain's National Security Intelligence and his clients have been pressured. He continues to be harassed and has received blackmail threats since January 2011.
113. In May 2012, he attended the United Nations Human Rights Council Universal Periodic Review ("UPR") of Bahrain. Following his participation in the UPR process, a video of Mohamed Issa Al Tajer being intimate with his wife was

Emanuel Zeltser

114. In the late 1990s, Emanuel Zeltser, a U.S. national, represented a former Kremlin official, Pavel Borodin, who was charged by a Swiss court with money laundering. In addition to being a lawyer, Emanuel Zeltser is also a specialist on money laundering and organized crime. The Law Society intervened on behalf of Emanuel Zeltser in June 2008 after he was detained in Belarus in March 2008.
115. On March 12, 2008, Emanuel Zeltser was held in a state security services detention facility in Minsk, where he was interrogated, beaten and denied the medicine to treat his diabetes and arthritis. On March 21, 2008, he was charged with "use of forged documents." The U.S. Embassy was only allowed to visit him twice, on March 27 and April 25, 2008. After the second visit, the U.S. Consul reported that Emanuel Zeltser's health was failing. He had lost weight, was very weak and had difficulty walking and talking. He also reported he had been beaten two or three times while in custody.
116. In addition to representing, Pavel Borodin, a former Kremlin official, Emanuel Zeltser's work included testifying about a money laundering scheme at the Bank of New York Mellon. He also sued the bank for $2 billion on behalf of depositors who had lost money in an affiliate.<sup>56</sup>

Human Rights Violations against Lawyers

118. On October 31, 2007, the Law Society first intervened on behalf of human rights lawyers working in China. Increasingly, lawyers were being harassed and persecuted for merely performing their legitimate professional duties. Some of the lawyers harassed were Gao Zhisheng, Director of the Beijing-based Shengzhi Law office, who was again subjected to ill treatment. He went missing after ten plainclothes State Security Protection officers took him away on September 22, 2007. Another lawyer, Li Heping was abducted in the parking lot of his law office by a dozen plainclothes men. Finally, the Shandong Provincial Bureau of Judicial Affairs refused to renew Li Jianqiang's licence to practice law.<sup>57</sup> Revoking or refusing to renew the licence of lawyers representing unpopular clients is a common form of harassment.
119. Again, in April 2008, the Law Society intervened on behalf of lawyers in China. Human rights lawyers were subjected to an escalating pattern of persecution and harassment by authorities. Hundreds of Tibetans were arrested in connection with the March 14, 2008 unrest in Tibet and the violent crackdown on the protests by Chinese security forces. As a result, on April 2, 2008, 18 Chinese lawyers publically offered to provide legal assistance to the detained Tibetans.
120. Chinese authorities told the lawyers that they should not involve themselves in the "Tibet incident". Authorities questioned lawyers involved in providing legal representation to the Tibetan protestors and placed them under surveillance and tapped their phones.<sup>58</sup> The Law Society has consistently condemned the persecution and ill-treatment of lawyers in China.

Guo Feixiong (aka Yang Maodong)

121. The Law Society also intervened in China on behalf of Guo Feixiong (also known as Yang Maodong) in April 2007, January 2008 and again in January 2009. Guo

Feixiong is currently serving a five year sentence in Meizhou Prison, Guangdong Province.

122. Guo Feixiong is a self-taught legal defender based in Guangzhou and adviser with Gao Zhisheng's Beijing-based Shengzhi law firm. Guo's human rights work began in 2005, when he helped organize villagers in Taishi, Guangzhou protest against official corruption and land seizures. In 2006, Guo campaigned alongside prominent human rights lawyer, Gao Zhisheng, against a government crackdown on human rights activists. He was formally arrested in late 2006 on charges of "illegal business activity," based on a book he wrote about a political scandal in Liaoning Province. He was sentenced to five years in prison, where he was tortured.
123. Guo Feixiong's current detention followed his release in September 2011 from a five-year prison term for his earlier activism. According to police, Guo is now facing prosecution for the following acts: delivering a speech promoting press freedom during a protest in January 2013 by supporters of Southern Weekly journalists on strike, organizing campaigns in April 2013 calling for disclosure of officials' wealth, and urging the government to ratify the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, which China signed in 1998.
124. He was arrested again in August 2013 for his involvement in campaigns promoting press freedom, political rights, and transparency. On December 10, 2013, police from the Guangzhou Municipal Public Security Bureau concluded their investigation and submitted an "Indictment Opinion" to the District People's Procuratorate. They recommended that Guo Feixiong be indicted for "disrupting public order," a charge increasingly used against Chinese rights activists and which carries a maximum sentence of five years in prison. Chinese law requires that prosecutors decide within 30 days whether to issue an indictment. Although the 30-day limit passed, no announcement was made.

125. Authorities denied numerous requests from Guo Feixiong's lawyers to meet with him, permitting the first such meeting to occur in November, more than three months after he was taken into custody.

Colombia

126. Over the years, the Law Society has intervened on behalf of a number of lawyers and human rights organizations in Columbia who have represented political prisoners and groups. The Law Society is concerned about situations where lawyers who work to defend the rights of others are themselves targeted for exercising their freedoms and rights under the law.

William Cristancho Duarte

127. In January 2011, the Law Society intervened on behalf of William Cristancho Duarte, who is working on cases involving the extrajudicial executions of civilians murdered by military groups.
128. During Colombia's armed conflict, which has lasted over four decades, extrajudicial executions were carried out by the security forces in a widespread and systematic manner. These executions are part of the terror tactics used by the security forces as part of their counter-insurgency strategy. Columbia's Attorney General's Office is investigating more than 2,000 cases of extrajudicial executions.
129. William Cristancho Duarte's has received death threats, including an assassination attempt as a result of his work. In December 2010, shots were fired at his car. Repeatedly, lawyers like William Cristancho Duarte who campaign for justice for victims of extrajudicial executions have been threatened or killed by members of the security forces or paramilitaries working with security forces.<sup>59</sup>

<sup>59</sup> Law Society of Upper Canada, "William Cristancho Duarte Letter of Intervention and Public Statement" (4 February 2011).

José Humberto Torres

130. After receiving reports of the bounty offered by paramilitary groups for the assassination of lawyer, José Humberto Torres, the Law Society intervened on his behalf in May 2012.
131. José Humberto Torres, a distinguished Colombian human rights defender, is known for defending political prisoners and fellow human rights defenders on behalf of the Fundación Comité de Solidaridad con los Presos Políticos (Political Prisoners Solidarity Committee). He was involved in a case against Jorge Noguera, former director of the Colombian Intelligence Agency, for his involvement in the assassination of professor Alfredo Correa de Andreis. He called for criminal investigation into the links between members of Congress and paramilitary groups and their alleged involvement in various crimes. He also participated in various cases against army leaders for alleged human rights violations.
132. An outspoken advocate for victims of extrajudicial killings, paramilitary groups have called for José Humberto Torres' assassination. These groups have publicized that they will pay a bounty equivalent to US $120,000 to anyone who assassinates José Humberto Torres.<sup>60</sup>

Congo

133. The Law Society has intervened on behalf of a number of lawyers and human rights organizations in the Congo who have represented former political leaders, persons considered undesirable or prisoners unable to get representation.

Marie-Thérèse Nlandu Mpolo-Nene

134. In February 2007, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Marie-Thérèse Nlandu Mpolo-Nene regarding her arrest and detention.

<sup>60</sup> Law Society of Upper Canada, "José Humberto Torres Letter of Intervention and Public Statement" (28 May 2012).

135. The highly charged political climate in the Congo made retaining legal representation difficult. Marie-Thérèse Nlandu Mpolo-Nene, a human rights lawyer, agreed to represent Jean-Pierre Bemba, the former Vice-President of Congo, in his appeal to the Supreme Court of Justice against the results of the second round of presidential elections in 2007.
136. On November 21, 2006, members of the Special Services police arrested Marie-Thérèse Nlandu Mpolo-Nene, at the Kin-Mazière police station, the Special Services police headquarters, where she went to visit six of her colleagues who were arrested the day before. She was charged with “organizing an insurrectionary movement” and with “illegal possession of firearms.”
137. The charge for organizing an insurrection movement related to a speech she made to supporters of Jean-Pierre Bemba outside the Supreme Court on November 20, 2006, in which she asked them to exercise their right to protest “in a disciplined way.” Marie-Thérèse Nlandu Mpolo-Nene is also the leader of the political party for peace. Her arrest and detention are a result of her representation of Jean-Pierre Bemba.<sup>61</sup>

Jean-Claude Mubalama and Charles Cubaka

138. Charles Cubaka and Jean-Claude Mubalama are Congolese lawyers who were involved in a high profile appeal of four civilian men who were appearing before a military court. They were sentenced to death in August 2007 for the murder of a radio journalist, Serge Maheshe. The investigators failed to pursue allegations of possible military involvement in their investigation of Serge Maheshe’s murder.
139. Charles Cubaka and Jean-Claude Mubalama both received a series of anonymous threats warning them to stop criticizing the conduct of the appeal

Haiti

Mario Joseph, Newton St-Juste and André Michel

140. The Law Society intervened in both 2012 and 2013 on behalf of Mario Joseph, Newton St-Juste and André Michel.
141. Newton St-Juste and André Michel filed claims against both the wife and son of the President of the Republic of Haiti for corruption and embezzlement of public funds. Mario Joseph, a prominent human rights lawyer and head of the International Lawyers Office (Bureau des Avocats Internationaux), was involved in a number of political cases such as proceedings against former dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier. Another case was against the United Nations for their alleged involvement in spreading the cholera epidemic in Haiti as well as a case dealing with the forced evictions of people made homeless after the earthquake.
142. On September 28, 2012, the former Chief Prosecutor of Port-au-Prince, Jean Renel Sénatus, claimed that he had been dismissed by the Ministry of Justice because he refused to implement an order to arrest 36 people. On the list were lawyers Newton St-Juste and André Michel.
143. Mario Joseph, Newton St-Juste and André Michel have reported receiving anonymous telephone death threats in recent months. In addition, they have reported other acts of intimidation, including hostile graffiti painted on walls and police vigilance in proximity of their offices and homes. It is believed that the three lawyers are being targeted for their activism and criticisms against the Haitian government.<sup>63</sup>

144. In November 2013, the Law Society intervened again on behalf of André Michel. On October 22, 2013, human rights lawyer André Michel was arbitrarily held for one night in police custody. While on his way home, André Michel's car was stopped by police officers who attempted to carry out a search of his vehicle. He refused to get out. He said he would only accept the search if a justice of the peace was called, a request which is in accordance with Haitian law. The search was eventually carried out in the presence of justice of the peace and no evidence of wrongdoing was found. However, he was held overnight in custody for the obstruction of justice.
145. In 2013, André Michel was still involved in legal proceedings against the wife and eldest son of Haiti's president. Since the beginning of this case, he stated that he has faced intimidation and has received threats. Shortly after André Michel's release on October 23, 2013, a member of the Office of the Prosecutor declared to the press that the July 2013 arrest warrant, which had never been executed, would be carried out. He continues to work under the risk of being arrested.
146. In July 2013, an arrest warrant was issued against André Michel for his alleged involvement in a murder. His client, the complainant in the corruption case, was arrested on the same charge and remains in detention.<sup>64</sup>

India

Noor Mohammad, Muhammad Shoaib, Zayfarayab Jilani and A M Faridi

147. In November 2008, the Law Society intervened on behalf of four lawyers, Noor Mohammad, Muhammad Shoaib, Zayfarayab Jilani and A M Faridi, who were being harassed, intimidated and assaulted. The police were complicit in the attacks against lawyers. The lawyers defended Muslim clients accused of terrorist acts, despite the fact that some of India's bar associations implemented bans preventing lawyers from representing these clients.

148. These bans are contrary to the fundamental right to be considered innocent until proven guilty. Lawyers should not be intimidated by their colleagues in the course of the legitimate discharge of their professional duties.<sup>65</sup>

Iran

149. Over the years, the Law Society has intervened on behalf of a number of lawyers and human rights organizations in Iran who have represented political prisoners and groups. In particular, the Law Society continues to intervene and monitor Nasrin Sotoudeh's case.

Nasrin Sotoudeh

150. In both September 2010 and October 2013, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Nasrin Sotoudeh.
151. On September 4, 2010, Nasrin Sotoudeh, a prominent human rights lawyer, was arrested. She is known for defending juveniles facing the death penalty, prisoners of conscience and children victims of abuse. Nasrin Sotoudeh also represented several political activists and protesters who were arrested in the aftermath of the disputed presidential election in Iran in 2009. She is also a member of the Iranian Women's Rights Movement "One Million Signature Campaign" which collects signatures from Iranians opposed to the country's discriminatory laws against women.
152. She chose to represent clients who many lawyers were afraid to defend. She represented several political activists and protesters who were arrested in the aftermath of the disputed presidential election in Iran in 2009. Her clients included journalist Isa Saharkhiz, Nobel Peace Prize laureate Shirin Ebadi, and Heshmat Tabarzadi, head of the banned opposition group Democratic Front of Iran.

153. Nasrin Sotoudeh was sent to the Evin prison court, where she had been summoned by the Revolutionary Prosecutor's Office on charges of "propaganda against the State" and "collusion and gathering with the aim of acting against national security, and membership in the Centre for Human Rights Defenders". After her questioning by a magistrate, she was arrested. Her lawyer was not permitted to be present during the questioning.
154. In January 2011, she was sentenced to 11 years in prison, and given a 20 year ban on practicing law as well as a 20 year ban on foreign travel. An appeals court later reduced her sentence to 6 years.
155. A few days prior to her arrest, she had reported to the International Campaign for Human Rights in Iran that the Iranian authorities were using tax harassment against human rights lawyers in order to limit their working conditions. She gave the example of lawyer Shirin Ebadi, who was subjected to the payment of taxes of hundreds of thousands of dollars on the money she had been granted for her Nobel Peace Prize.<sup>66</sup>

Kenya

Haroun Ndubi

156. The Law Society intervened on behalf of Haroun Ndubi after he received a death threat as a result of his criticism of the elections and his public interest work regarding the election's irregularities in Kenya.
157. On February 6, 2008, Haroun Ndubi lawyer and member of the Kenya Domestic Observers Forum received a death threat along with Muthoni Wanyeki, Executive Director of the Kenya Human Rights Commission ("KHRC"), Gladwell Otieno,

Director of the Africa Centre for Open Government, Njeri Kabeberi, Executive Director of the Centre for Multi-Party Democracy/ the death threat was also directed at Maina Kiai, the former Chairman of KHRC and Chair of the Kenya National Commission on Human Rights, Ndung'u Wainaina, member of the National Convention Executive Council, James Maina, member of Bunge La Mwananchi (the People's Parliament), and David Ndi, co-founder and Director of the Kenya Leadership Institute, a non-profit organization that seeks to raise-awareness on public policy issues, and author of a report on the last elections' irregularities.

158. Haroun Ndubi received anonymous calls threatening to cut off his head if he did not stop talking about the results of the Kenyan general election, which was held on December 27, 2007. In addition to commenting on election irregularities, Haroun Ndubi also drew attention to the human rights abuses that occurred during the violence that followed the elections.<sup>67</sup>

Peru

Francisco Soberon

159. The Law Society intervened on behalf of Francisco Soberon, a Peruvian human rights lawyer and recipient of the French National Order of Merit Award. He also established the Asociación Pro Derechos Humanos ("APRODEH"). The purpose of the APRODEH is to combat the continued human rights abuses, including routine beatings, torture, "disappearances" and arbitrary detentions, prevalent in Peru.
160. Francisco Soberon was involved in prosecuting former Peruvian President Fujimori for ordering two massacres that killed 25 people in the 1990s. Senior government officials threatened him and made derogatory remarks about him and the APRODEH. He was subjected to harassment. The Peruvian government attempted to have the APRODEH classified as a terrorist organization but the European Parliament refused the request.<sup>68</sup>

Russia

Sapiyat Magomedova

161. The Law Society has intervened on behalf of Sapiyat Magomedova, a criminal and human rights lawyer, in November 2010, April 2012 and July 2013. Her law firm is known for taking on cases relating to abductions, torture and extrajudicial executions in the Northern Caucasus region of Dagestan in Russia.
162. Sapiyat Magomedova represents victims in highly sensitive cases. She has defended individuals suspected of involvement with the insurgency in Dagestan and who have been tortured by the police. As a result of discharging her professional duties, Sapiyat Magomedova has experienced a continued pattern of harassment and intimidation.
163. Sapiyat Magomedova was assaulted by police inside Khasavyurt town police station on June 17th, 2010. She traveled there to visit a client but was denied access. She was subsequently taken to a security checkpoint by four police officers from the special intervention unit. They then beat her until she was unconscious. As a result, Sapiyat Magomedova was hospitalized for several weeks.
164. In October 2010, Sapiyat Magomedova challenged the legality of the prosecutor's decision to open a criminal case against her. Reports indicated several procedural violations occurred during court hearings. For instance, the hearing of her application began later than is legally mandated and only after a lawyer representing Sapiyat Magomedova contacted the court about it. The first hearing on November 1, 2010 was adjourned and has since been delayed twice.

165. On March 14, 2012, she learned that the criminal investigations against both her and the officers had been closed several months prior. However, she had not been notified. At that time, Sapiyat Magomedova and her colleague Musa Suslanov were working on a high profile criminal case, representing the families of five men who were killed. On May 19, 2013, Musa Suslanov received a text message from an unknown mobile phone number, telling him and his colleague to withdraw from the case if they wished to stay alive.<sup>69</sup>

Sudan

166. The Law Society intervened in Sudan in October 2006 and November 2013. In both cases, the lawyers were working to defend their clients while they were harassed and, in some cases, detained.

Mossaad Mohamed Ali, Rasha Souraj, Ebtisam Alsemani, Najat Dafaalla and Mohamed Badawi

167. Mossaad Mohamed Ali, Rasha Souraj, Ebtisam Alsemani, Najat Dafaalla and Mohamed Badawi are lawyers and members of the Amel Centre for the Treatment and Rehabilitation of Victims of Torture. This organization provides legal aid to victims of torture and sexual violence. Mossaad Mohamed Ali, Rasha Souraj, Ebtisam Alsemani, Najat Dafaalla and Mohamed Badawi have all been harassed, threatened and summoned to security offices and detained. Sometimes the detentions lasted hours, days and were also detentions incommunicado.
168. In May 2006, officers from the National Security Bureau ("NSB") in Nyala, Southern Darfur, summoned Mossaad Mohamed Ali for questioning. He was detained and remained in detention until May 20, 2006. He was denied access to his family and to legal counsel. Security officers denied the United Nations Mission in Sudan ("UNMIS") an opportunity to meet with him. No reason was given as to why Mossaad Mohamed Ali was summoned, arrested and held incommunicado.

169. On July 27, 2006, Mossaad Mohamed Ali and volunteer lawyers at the Amel Centre, Rasha Souraj and Ebtisam Alsemani were accused of sending false reports and of disclosing information of a military nature. They were then warned that their case had been given to the police and that they would likely be arrested following a police investigation.
170. On August 1, 2006, Mossaad Mohamed Ali and Najat Dafa Alla were accused of spreading false information and of being a threat to public security. It is believed that they were being investigated for their work in defending the rights of five individuals from the Otash camp, who were detained after participating in a demonstration against the Darfur Peace Agreement, on May 30 and 31, 2006.<sup>70</sup>

Adam Sharief

171. Adam Sharief is a lawyer and the coordinator of the Darfur Bar Association in South Darfur. According to reports, he was arrested on September 26, 2013 and held without charge. Adam Sharief has not been granted access to a lawyer.
172. Six days before his arrest, Adam Sharief participated in an interview with independent radio station, Radio Dabanga. During this interview, he criticized the Governor of South Darfur for the lack of security in Nyala, the capital of South Darfur. His criticism was linked to the protests that broke out in Nyala on September 18, 2013, after Ismail Ibrahim Wadi, a prominent local businessman and the president of the local football team, his son and nephew were killed. Protestors said the militia employed by the local authorities were responsible for the killings. Adam Sharief also criticized the use of live ammunition by security forces on September 19, 2013, to disperse demonstrators that gathered around the South Darfur government offices to call for the Governor to resign.

173. Adam Sharief's detention is linked to his advocacy on behalf of those at the protest and for exercising his right to freedom of expression.<sup>71</sup>

Syria

174. In both February 2010 and January 2011, the Law Society intervened in Syria on behalf of lawyers, who were providing legal services and challenging the government on its human rights record. In both cases, the lawyers were working to defend their clients while they were harassed and, in some cases, detained.

Haytham al-Maleh

175. Haytham al-Maleh is a 78 year old Syrian human rights lawyer who has been imprisoned by Syrian authorities for "weakening national sentiment", "spreading false information" and insulting the President and the judiciary. At the time of his arrest, Haytham al-Maleh was defending Muhannad al-Hassani, another human rights lawyer and President of the Syrian Human Rights Organization ("SHRO"), who was being tried on charges related to his work defending the rights of political prisoners.
176. On October 13, 2009, an officer from the Political Security, Syria's Intelligence Services, contacted Haytham al-Maleh, and told him to report to the Political Security's branch in Damascus. He refused to go. The next day he disappeared. Initially, Haytham al-Maleh's whereabouts were unknown, but on October 18, 2009 the Syrian authorities acknowledged they are holding him.
177. Haytham al-Maleh has been imprisoned and harassed by the Syrian authorities for his human rights work before. He was imprisoned from 1980-1986 for his work for the Freedom and Human Rights Committee of the Syrian Lawyers Union.<sup>72</sup>

Radeef Moustafa

178. Radeef Moustafa is the president of the Kurdish Committee for Human Rights and coordinator of the Syria Coalition against Capital Punishment. He provides pro bono legal services to human rights defenders in Syria, such as Muhannad Al-Hassani.
179. In response to Radeef Moustafa's activities in support of human rights defenders and the Kurdish minority in Syria, he has experienced ongoing harassment from Syrian authorities. He has been subjected to travel restrictions and most recently was summoned for a disciplinary hearing on December 19th 2010 with the Syrian Bar Association. The grounds for referral include membership in a non-licensed organization, incitement against Syrian authorities through his writing and harming national unity by publishing unfounded news. He is also accused of committing crimes against state security.
180. Muhannad Al-Hassani was the target of similarly disputed procedures by the Syrian Bar Association. He was eventually disbarred and imprisoned. This disciplinary action against Radeef Moustafa is similarly viewed as an act of harassment by the Syrian Bar Association.<sup>73</sup>

Tunisia

181. The Law Society intervened on behalf of a Tunisian lawyer who was exercising his right to freedom of expression.

Mohammed Abbou

182. Mohammed Abbou, a lawyer and member of the National Council for Civil Liberties in Tunisia, was arrested in March 2005 as a result of an article he published online. In November 2005, the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention concluded that Mohammed Abbou's detention was arbitrary and in violation of international law.

183. In April 2006, Mohammed Abbou was sentenced to three years and six months in prison. While in detention, he undertook several hunger strikes in protest at the conditions of his detention. He continues to face harassment and ill treatment by the prison administration.<sup>74</sup>

Thailand

184. The Law Society has previously intervened on behalf of human rights defenders in Thailand and is always concerned when lawyers face reprisals for representing clients in politically sensitive cases.

Robert Amsterdam

185. Robert Amsterdam has acted for many clients involved in politically sensitive circumstances. He was legal counsel to former Prime Minister of Thailand Thaksin Shinawatra, political prisoners like Eligio Cedeno of Venezuela and Singapore's Dr. Chee Soon Juan.
186. As a result of his work, Robert Amsterdam has been intimidated and harassed. He has threatened with legal action for representing former Prime Minister of Thailand Thaksin Shinawatra. Despite the outcome of the July 2011 general election in Thailand, there are still concerns for his personal safety.<sup>75</sup>

Turkey

187. In both October 2012 and June 2013, the Law Society intervened on behalf of lawyers in Turkey who were facing reprisals for providing advice to their clients.

Lawyers Defending Kurdish Minority

188. Turkish lawyers who defend their client's civil and political rights in politically sensitive cases are subjected to judicial harassment. Defence lawyers representing imprisoned Kurdistan Workers Party ("PKK") leader, Abdullah Öcalan, have been particularly at risk. At least 68 lawyers have been the subject of more than one hundred criminal cases since 2005 that accuse them of violating Article 314 of the Turkish Penal Code ("TPC") and Articles 6 and 7 of the Anti- Terrorism Law ("ATL"), and of "complicity with a terrorist organisation."
189. In November and December 2011, a police operation aiming to dismantle an alleged terrorist network known as the Kurdish Communities Union started. The police operation targeted lawyers involved or believed to be providing legal services to Abdullah Öcalan. A total of 41 lawyers were arrested and subsequently charged as part of this police operation. Three persons employed by the accused lawyers were also arrested. The law offices and houses of the lawyers were searched. Confidential files were consulted by the police and some were sealed.
190. A total of 46 lawyers, including the lawyers previously detained, along with three legal workers and one journalist have been collectively charged and are being tried together. All the parties charged are either of Kurdish origin or represent clients in cases related to the Kurdish issue, and the accusations and charges are all founded on the legal representation of Abdullah Öcalan.
191. On November 26, 2011, the lawyers were brought before the court. Thirty-three of the detained lawyers were refused a provisional release. The others were released. However, the public prosecutor objected to the provisional release of lawyers, Mehmet Ayata and Mahmut Alinak. The court issued detention orders and these lawyers were re-arrested on December 8, 2011. Mehmet Sabir Tas, who was abroad when the arrests occurred, was arrested and detained when he went to the public prosecutor to give his statement on November 30, 2011. On December 8, 201, 36 lawyers and one journalist were still in custody.<sup>76</sup>

Lawyers Denouncing Repression

192. More than 50 lawyers were arrested on June 11, 2013 for protesting at Caglayan Justice Palace to denounce the repression of the Occupy Gezi protestors. Reportedly, many of the lawyers were beaten and kicked on the ground by police and their clothes were torn.<sup>77</sup> Increasingly, lawyers in Turkey are being harassed for their advocacy and exercising their right to freedom of expression.

United Arab Emirates

193. The Law Society intervened in September 2012 and July 2013 on behalf of lawyers working in the United Arab Emirates ("UAE").

Mohamed 'Abdullah al-Roken, Dr. Mohamed al-Mansoori and Salem al-Shehi

194. Dr. Mohamed 'Abdullah al-Roken acted as defence counsel for five UAE residents who were arrested in April 2011 for posting articles on an online forum that were critical of the UAE government and called for political reform. In retaliation, he was prevented from lecturing at University of Al Ain. On July 17, 2012, as Dr. al-Roken was driving to the police station in Dubai to tell the police that his son and brother-in law were missing, he was arrested by authorities. He learned that both his son and brother-in-law had also been detained.
195. Dr. Mohamed al-Mansoori is the former head of the UAE Jurists' Association. He was fired from his position as legal advisor to the government of Ras Al Khaimah in January 2012 after he criticized restrictions on freedom of speech in the UAE during a television interview. He has been barred from traveling since October 2007 and the government has refused to renew his passport. On July 16, 2012,

Dr. al-Mansoori left the house to run an errand when he was approached by plainclothes officers and taken into custody. Afterwards, 25 to 28 officers searched his house and seized laptops, an iPad and papers.

196. Salem al-Shehhi, a lawyer, was arrested on July 18, 2012, when he went to the State Security Prosecutor's office to ask about his clients, Dr. al-Mansoori and Dr. al-Roken.<sup>78</sup>

Human Rights Lawyers Speaking Out

197. The Law Society intervened on behalf of 94 lawyers, activists and human rights defenders. Since March 4, 2013, 94 government critics, many of them lawyers, have been on trial for violating the Penal Code provision which prohibits founding, organizing, or operating a group that aims to overthrow the country's political system. Approximately 60 of those arrested are connected to the Reform and Social Guidance Association (al-Islah), a peaceful group that advocates for greater adherence to Islamic precepts. At least 64 of the defendants were arrested and held in undisclosed locations for up to a year prior to the trial, some in extended periods of solitary confinement. Reports indicate that at least some of them had also been subjected to torture and ill-treatment while in custody. Many of the defendants were also denied legal assistance for several months, and when they eventually did see a lawyer, it was done so in the presence of a representative of the State Security Prosecutor, contrary to Emirati law and international fair trial standards.
198. Independent observers and international media were barred from attending the trial, which has been plagued by allegations of unfairness and a lack of due process. The lawyers for the defendants further identified that their case files had been tampered with. Relatives of the defendants were also barred from attending the trial. If convicted, the defendants could face up to 15 years imprisonment.<sup>79</sup>

Vietnam

Nguyen Van Dai and Le Thi Cong Nhan

199. The Law Society intervened on the behalf of Nguyen Van Dai and Le Thi Cong Nhan in August 2007. Both these lawyers were known for defending protestors. On November 13, 2006, Nguyen Van Dai, reported that he had been interrogated by police for days in the run up to the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation Leaders' Summit which was held in Hanoi, Vietnam, in November 2006. The next day, ten security police officers surrounded Nguyen Van Dai's home and posted signs marked 'No Foreigners.' He was prohibited from having visitors until the last day of the Summit.
200. Prior to his arrest in March 2007, Nguyen Van Dai started the blog "the Reporters without Borders Blog" where he posted his essay on political parties. On March 6, 2007, security forces raided his home and arrested him for "conducting propaganda against the Socialist Republic of Vietnam".<sup>80</sup>
201. On May 11, 2007, Nguyen Van Dai and Le Thi Cong Nhan, a lawyer and spokesperson for the Progression Party, were sentenced in the Ha Noi People's Court. Nguyen Van Dai was sentenced to 5 years in prison and 4 years house arrest. Le Thi Cong Nhan was sentenced to 4 years in prison and 3 years house arrest, for "spreading propaganda against the State".

Zimbabwe

Bar Association Report on Zimbabwe – 2001, which outlined the results of a fact finding mission organized by the Human Rights Institute of the International Bar Association. Since then, the Law Society has intervened on behalf of Beatrice Mtetwa and Arnold Tsunga.

Beatrice Mtetwa

203. Beatrice Mtetwa is a human rights lawyer and the former president of the Law Society of Zimbabwe. She also represented Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai, Zimbabwean President Mugabe's main political rival.
204. On March 17, 2013, Beatrice Mtetwa was arrested while attempting to assist her clients. The arrest took place on the day following Zimbabwe's constitutional referendum. The new constitution would curb the powers of the president and limit presidential power to two five-year terms. Both Zimbabwean President Robert Mugabe and his rivals were in favour of the new constitution.
205. The day after the referendum, police arrested four senior aides of President Mugabe's main political rival, Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai. When Beatrice Mtetwa was called to the home of Prime Minister Tsvangirai's chief legal advisor, where police were conducting a search, she was arrested and charged with "obstructing or defeating the course of justice". Beatrice Mtetwa asked the police officers to produce a search warrant and an inventory list of items that had been removed by the police. Officers accused her of trying to photograph security officers. She was handcuffed and forced into a police vehicle. Reports also state that police confiscated her mobile phone, which contains privileged solicitor-client information.
206. On March 25, 2013, a high court judge finally decided to grant bail to Beatrice Mtetwa under three conditions: that she post a $500 bail, that she reside at a given address and that she not interfere with the ongoing investigations.

According to reports, at 1:40 p.m. on March 25, 2013, Beatrice Mtetwa was finally released from prison.<sup>81</sup>

Arnold Tsunga

207. The Law Society has followed Arnold Tsunga's career. He is the recipient of the Human Rights Watch award in 2006. In March 2007, the Law Society invited Arnold Tsunga, then Executive Director of the Zimbabwe Lawyers for Human Rights and Acting Executive Secretary of the Law Society of Zimbabwe, to make a presentation at the Law Society on the rule of law in Zimbabwe.
208. Arnold Tsunga met with the directors of the Law Society. The Law Society agreed to collaborate with the Law Society of Zimbabwe to assist it in strengthening its self-regulation capabilities and the independence of the legal profession in Zimbabwe.
209. As a human rights lawyer, Arnold Tsunga helped document human rights abuses in Zimbabwe and has brought them to the attention of the international community. He worked for the International Commission of Jurists and was elected a member of the Zimbabwean parliament in 2013.
210. Zimbabwean police arrested Arnold Tsunga around July 20, 2013. He was running for the Movement for Democratic Change of Prime Minister Morgan Tsvangirai in the eastern city of Mutare. He was detained at Dangamvura police station along with his campaign team for allegedly holding an unauthorised rally. Police have stated their intention to transfer Arnold Tsunga and his colleagues to Mutare Central Police Station. The Law Society of Zimbabwe has also indicated that another Movement for Democratic Change activist and lawyer, Jacob Mafume, was barred from holding a campaign rally in a Harare suburb.<sup>82</sup>

Advocating For Prisoners of Conscience

211. Prisoners of conscience are confronted by systemic barriers to accessing justice. These individuals are imprisoned because of the non-violent expression of their consciously held beliefs. Other times they are imprisoned because of their race, sexual orientation, religion or political views.

Equatorial Guinea

Fabián Nsue Nguema

212. In November 22, 2012, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Fabián Nsue Nguema, a prominent lawyer and human rights defender. He has acted as defense counsel for a number of political opponents and prisoners of conscious. He is also a leading member of Unión Popular (“UP”), a political party that monitors and exposes human rights violations.<sup>83</sup>

213. In March 2004, he represented a group of people accused of attempting a coup. He also represented Simon Mann, a British citizen who was jailed in 2008 for plotting to overthrow the President. He was defence counsel for four UP members who were accused of having attacked the Presidential Palace in February 2009.

214. Throughout his representation of prisoners of conscience, Fabián Nsue Nguema has been harassed, detained and arrested. In April 2002, he was arrested on his way to defend a group of political prisoners. A few months later, he was arrested and tried for defaming the President and given a one year prison sentence. In June 2005, the Bar Association in Equatorial Guinea arbitrarily suspended his license alleged misconduct. The International Bar Association issued a statement in July 2005 stating they believed Fabián Nsue Nguema’s disbarment was politically motivated.<sup>84</sup>

215. On October 22, 2012, Fabián Nsue Nguema received a call from the Inspector general of National Security notifying him he could visit an imprisoned client, Augustin Nzogo, who was connected to a non-governmental organization called Transparency International France. While at the prison, he disappeared. Later authorities confirmed he was in prison. Fabián Nsue Nguema has not been charged. He has no access to his lawyer or his family.<sup>85</sup>

Saleh Kamrani

216. The Law Society intervened in February 2007 on behalf of Saleh Kamarani, an Iranian Azerbaijani lawyer who was harassed, arrested and imprisoned by Iranian authorities. Saleh Kamrani represented a number of Iranian Azerbaijanis who have been detained in connection with their political or cultural activities and has defended members of other ethnic groups. He defended high profile prisoners of conscience such as Iranian Arab writer Yusuf Azizi Bani Torof and Persian human rights defender Mohsen Sazegara.
217. Iranian security forces have continually harassed Saleh Kamrani. He has been threatened with arrest. His telephone conversations, correspondence and contacts were monitored. He was interrogated and threatened by security officials whenever he left or returned to Iran, was been prevented from leaving Iran on several occasions, and has also been detained.
218. On June 14, 2006, as Saleh Kamrani left his office to give an interview, he was accosted by three plain-clothes men. They handcuffed him and forced him into their car. He was then taken to Evin prison and neither his family nor his lawyer was notified. Four days later, the Ministry of Intelligence acknowledged Saleh Kamrani 's detention.

219. While in prison, he was held in solitary confinement and subjected to psychological torture. He spent 97 days in solitary confinement. He went on a hunger strike for seven days.<sup>86</sup>

Nasser Zarafshan

220. Lawyer Nasser Zarafshan's ongoing detention prompted the Law Society to intervene on his behalf in February 2007. He was imprisoned in Evin prison since August 2002 and released in March 2007.

221. Nasser Zarafshan is a human rights lawyer, an author and a translator. He is a distinguished member of the Iranian Writers' Association, Kanoon, a member of the Committee on Serial Killings in Iran and a member of the Iranian Bar Association. He represented families of two Iranian writers who were assassinated in November 1998. Nasser Zarafshan was charged with publishing information about the assassinations in December 2000 and was imprisoned. In February of 2002, he was tried in a closed door military court. While in prison he was severely beaten.<sup>87</sup>

Abdolfattah Soltani

222. Abdolfattah Soltani is a well-known Iranian human rights lawyer. He represents the family of Zahra Kazemi, an Iranian-Canadian photojournalist murdered in Iran. In October 2003, the Iranian Parliament released its inquiry into the death of Zahra Kazemi and concluded that Saeed Mortazavi, Prosecutor General of Tehran, and other members of the judiciary were directly involved in her death.
223. On July 27, 2005, two warrants were issued for his arrest. Abdolfattah Soltani was charged with releasing "secret and classified national intelligence information" in connection with his work defending an espionage case. He was arrested on July 30, 2005 when he took part in a sit-in protest at the Bar of Tehran. When he was imprisoned, he was held in solitary confinement for three months.

224. After seven months in prison, Abdolfattah Soltani was released temporarily following a bail hearing. His bail had originally been set at 8 billion Rials (about $870,000 US), an amount that far exceeded normal bail requirements, but it was later reduced to 1 billion Rials (about $109,504 US) due to pressure from his lawyers. On April 5, 2006, Abdolfattah Soltani appeared in court for the first time. Leading up to his trial, his lawyers were barred from accessing his case file. In addition to the charge of espionage, he was also charged with 'insulting the regime', "propaganda against the regime", and 'acting against national security'.
225. On July 16, 2006, Iran's Revolutionary Court acquitted him of espionage but convicted him of "disclosing confidential documents" and sentenced him to four years in prison. He was also convicted of 'propaganda against the system' and given an additional one year prison sentence.
226. As a human rights lawyer, Abdolfattah Soltani represented Akbar Ganji, during the journalist's imprisonment and long hunger strike. He also represented the imprisoned Iranian-American academic Haleh Esfandiari.<sup>88</sup>

Shirin Ebadi

227. In June 2008, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Shirin Ebadi, who was awarded the 2003 Nobel Peace Prize for her work promoting women's rights, children's rights and refugee rights.
228. In April 2008, Shirin Ebadi received death threats aimed at curtailing her human rights work. As a renowned human rights lawyer, she advocated on behalf of dissidents of the Iranian regime, and religious minorities such as the Baha'is. She was defence counsel in various child abuse cases and provided legal representation in censorship.

229. She often represented prisoners of conscience and their families. She represented the family of Dariush Forouhar, a dissident intellectual and politician who was found stabbed to death at his home. She also represented the family of Ezzat Ebrahim-Nejad, who was killed in the Iranian student protests in July 1999. Finally, Shirin Ebadi also represented the family of murdered Canadian-Iranian photojournalist, Zahra Kazemi.<sup>89</sup>

Kyrgyzstan

Tahir Asanov

230. The Law Society intervened in November 2010 on behalf of Tahir Asanov, who was defending an Uzbek man charged with killing the driver of a murdered police chief in June 2010. Violence erupted between Uzbek and ethnic Kyrgyz people which led to the displacement of about 400,000 people in June 2010.
231. During a trial hearing on September 30, 2010, Tahir Asanov called for an inquiry into allegations that his client, along with others, was assaulted while in custody. After the hearing, Tahir Asanov was beaten outside the courthouse. Although police were present at the scene, they failed to intervene. Moreover, the Prosecutor General's Office claims that all necessary security measures were taken to protect Tahir Asanov.<sup>90</sup>

Anwar al-Bunni

232. The Law Society intervened several times on behalf of Anwar al-Bunni, who is a lawyer and founding member of the Syrian Human Rights Association. He is also the head of the Committee for the Defence of Prisoners of Conscience.

<sup>90</sup> Law Society of Upper Canada, "Tahir Asanov Letter of Intervention and Public Statement" (29 November 2010).

233. In 2006, the Law Society first intervened when Anwar al-Bunni was arrested after signing the Beirut-Damascus Declaration. This petition, drawn up by 274 Syrian and Lebanese human rights activists, asked Syria to improve its diplomatic relations with Lebanon by respecting Lebanon's independence and sovereignty. He was charged with “undermining national pride”, “incitement to racial and sectarian hatred”, and “slander of public administrative and governmental bodies”<sup>91</sup>
234. In 2008, the Law Society intervened again over the treatment of Anwar al-Bunni while in detention and the lack of due process at his trial. He was prevented from talking to his lawyer. He was targeted in prison and was not allowed to receive food, clothes or books, and refused access to the prison library.<sup>92</sup>
235. Anwar al-Bunni represented many Syrian prisoners of conscience including: Riad al-Turk, Riad Seif, the owner of the independent newspaper The Lamplighter, Kurdish protestors and Damascus Spring activist Aref Dalila.

Muhannad al-Hassani

236. In February 2010, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Syrian lawyer Muhannad al-Hassani. His work centered on defending Syrian political prisoners and exposing abuses in the Supreme State Security Court (“SSSC”), a special tribunal that handles politically sensitive cases and is not bound by a code of procedure. Although Muhannad al-Hassani was not representing a specific client at the proceedings, he attended and documented the SSSC proceedings. He was then charged with “weakening national sentiment” and “spreading false information” and arrested. Muhannad al-Hassani was both imprisoned and disbarred.<sup>93</sup>

Khalil Ma'touq

237. In July 2013, Khalil Ma'touq's ongoing imprisonment prompted the Law Society to intervene on his behalf. Khalil Ma'touq is a prominent human rights lawyer in Syria and Executive Director of the Syrian Centre for Legal Studies and Research. He provided legal services to victims of human rights violations in Syria, including the defense of hundreds of political prisoners, prisoners of conscience and journalists.
238. On October 2, 2012, Khalil Ma'touq, his assistant Mohammed Thatha and a friend left his home to go work. Khalil Ma'touq and Mohammed Thatha did not arrive for work. They disappeared. Since then, their families have been unable to obtain any information about their whereabouts. Although Syrian law only allows detention for the purposes of investigation for a maximum period of sixty days, Khalil Ma'touq has been in detention for more than 240 days. The ongoing silence of Syrian authorities heightens worries that the men are being subjected to torture. In late May 2013, people close to Khalil Ma'touq and Mohammed Thatha received a tip indicating that Khalil Ma'touq was indeed in detention and that his health was deteriorating. It is unknown whether Khalil Ma'touq is receiving any medical care for his lung condition.
239. The arbitrary arrest and detention of Khalil Ma'touq is part of a widespread pattern of enforced disappearance and repression of lawyers in Syria. It is estimated that at least 37 lawyers are currently detained in Syria. Since anti-government protests erupted in March 2011, upwards of 1,300 individuals have reportedly died in custody, and many more have been subjected to torture and ill-treatment in Syrian detention centres and prisons. Several human rights organizations have condemned Syria's ongoing persecution, harassment and imprisonment of human rights lawyers who are engaged in legitimate, peaceful legal duties and human rights work.<sup>94</sup>

Razan Zaitouneh

240. Razan Zaitouneh is an award-winning human rights lawyer and writer who was abducted along with her husband, Wa'el Hamada, and two colleagues, Nazem Hamadi and Samira Khalil, by unknown individuals from a joint office of the Violations Documentation Centre ("VDC") and the Local Development and Small Projects Support ("LDSPTS") in the Damascus suburb of Douma. (Douma is located in Eastern Ghouta, an area under the control of a number of armed opposition groups that is being besieged by government forces.) The VDC is an independent non-governmental organization that documents human rights abuses committed by the Syrian government. The LDSPTS provides humanitarian assistance.
241. In 2011, Razan Zaitouneh was forced into hiding after receiving threats from the Syrian authorities. In recent months, she has received threats from at least one armed opposition group in Eastern Ghouta had.
242. Razan Zaitouneh has won several awards for her human rights work, including the 2013 International Women of Courage Award and the 2011 Sakharov Prize for Freedom of Thought. She largely defends political prisoners. Razan Zaitouneh is a co-founder of both the VDC and the LDSPTS.<sup>95</sup>

Le Quoc Quan

243. The Law Society intervened on behalf of Le Quoc Quan in February 2013, after learning he was subjected to arbitrary arrests, ongoing surveillance and harassment as a result of his human rights work. Le Quoc Quan writes a popular blog about human rights abuses. In 2007, Le Quoc Quan was disbarred following his return to Vietnam from the United States.

244. On December 27, 2012, Le Quoc Quan was arrested while dropping his daughter off at school. The police advised his family that he would be charged under Article 161 of the Criminal Code, which relates to tax evasion.
245. On August 2012, Le Quoc Quan was beaten by two unidentified men with iron bars outside his home in Hanoi. In October 2012, security police and plain-clothed militia forced entry into the office of a firm that belongs to Le Quoc Quan and his two brothers. Police allegedly seized files and documents belonging to the firm, assaulted the staff and detained the brothers for interrogation. They returned at a later date and arrested Le Quoc Quan's brother, Le Dinh Quan, who is currently detained in Hoa Lo Prison No. 3.
246. On October 2, 2013, Le Quoc Quan was convicted. The entire trial took one day. He was sentenced to 30 months in prison and fined 1.2 billion dong (approximately $59,000 USD), which was levied against the company where he is a director. The Hanoi Appeal Court upheld his conviction on February 18, 2014. Le Quoc Quan's conviction is believed to be politically motivated and intended to prevent him from continuing his legitimate human rights work.

Venezuela

Daniel Wilkinson

247. The Law Society intervened on November 7, 2008, after learning of the apprehension and deportation of lawyer Daniel Wilkinson, an American national and Managing Director of the Americas division at Human Rights Watch.
248. Daniel Wilkinson's deportation from Venezuela followed the release of a report by Human Rights Watch, entitled A Decade under Chavez, Political Intolerance and Lost Opportunities for Advancing Human Rights in Venezuela. He co-authored the report along with José Miguel Vivanco. Daniel Wilkinson's deportation is considered as "evidence of the Venezuelan authorities' lack of tolerance for all forms of dissenting voices" and is linked to his work as a human rights lawyer.<sup>96</sup>

Judges

Advocating For Judicial Independence

249. The judicial system cannot be subject to political pressures or influence. Citizens looking to the courts for remedies and justice must be confident the judiciary is free and independent.

Egypt

Hisham Bastawissi and Ashraf El-Baroudi

250. Human rights violations against judges in Egypt are not uncommon. In March 2008, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Justice Hisham Bastawissi and Justice Ashraf El-Baroudi, On February 7, 2008, reports indicated that restrictions had been placed on the freedom of movement of judges Hisham Bastawissi and Ashraf El-Baroudi. They were invited to attend a meeting on the independence of the judiciary organised by the Euro-Mediterranean Human Rights Network in Brussels from February 9 to 11, 2008. This event included a public seminar to be held at the European Parliament where both judges were expected to attend and speak. However, Egyptian authorities prohibited them from traveling.<sup>97</sup>

Nauru

Magistrates

Geoffrey Eames, issued an injunction preventing the removal of Peter Law from his position as Chief Magistrate and Supreme Court Register of Nauru. In response, Nauru's government revoked the visa of the Chief Justice and barred him from entering Nauru.

252. Both the removal and deportation of Peter Law and the revocation of the visa of the Chief Justice are linked to their administration and adjudication of asylum seeker cases. Prior to his removal and deportation, Peter Law was scheduled to hear the direction hearings of about 40 to 60 asylum seekers charged with rioting in 2013. As well, the revocation of the visa of Chief Justice Eames follows his issuance of an injunction stopping the Nauru government from removing and deporting Peter Law.<sup>98</sup>

Spain

Justice Baltasar Garzón

253. The Law Society intervened on behalf of Justice Baltasar Garzón in April 2012. He was convicted of abuse of power on February 9, 2012 as a result of his involvement in a high-profile corruption case. Justice Garzón ordered that the monitoring of the conversations between detainees and their lawyers should be an exception to the rule protecting attorney-client privilege.
254. This is not the first time that Justice Garzón has been the subject of a criminal prosecution as a result of discharging his duties as a judge. Justice Garzón was recently acquitted of abuse of power for ordering an investigation of Franco-era human rights abuses.<sup>99</sup>

Madam Justice Shirani Bandaranayake

255. In January 2013, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Madam Justice Shirani Bandaranayake, former Chief Justice of Sri Lanka. Justice Bandaranayake, the first female Chief Justice of Sri Lanka, was appointed on May 18, 2011. In October 2012, a parliamentary motion to impeach her was submitted.
256. President Mahinda Rajapaksa's United People's Freedom Alliance party had enough seats for the impeachment to succeed. The government declined to give full details of why it was moving against Justice Bandaranayake, but government spokesman Keheliya Rambukwella said Chief Justice Bandaranayake 's behaviour and conduct in the past year had "affected the sovereignty of the people", without giving further details. Critics say the move is evidence of the ruling party's attempt to stifle the courts' independence.
257. A large crowd gathered outside the Supreme Court in November 2012 denouncing what they see as President Rajapakasa's intention to cut the judiciary down. In October 2012, a judge was assaulted by a gang in Colombo after publicly saying that the government was putting direct pressure on the judiciary. Chief Justice Bandaranayake came under fire after delaying passage of a key bill, which would place previously devolved development funds under the minister of economic development, who is also one of the president's brothers. In December, a Parliamentary Select Committee found Chief Justice Bandaranayake guilty of professional misconduct, unexplained wealth and misuse of power.
258. Reports indicate that the case against Chief Justice Bandaranayake is part of a pattern of attacks and threats against members of the judiciary and lawyers and interference in their work. The steps that were taken towards impeaching the

Chief Justice appear to be the culminating point of a series of attacks against the judiciary for asserting its independence.<sup>100</sup>

Venezuela

Justice Maria Lourdes Afiuni

259. The Law Society has intervened on behalf of Justice Maria Lourdes Afiuni in June 2010, January 2012 and July 2013. Justice Afiuni's case first gained international attention when she was arrested by Venezuelan intelligence officers, on December 9, 2009, after ordering the conditional release pending trial of Eligio Cedeño. Cedeño's detention was declared arbitrary in September 2009 by the United Nations Working Group on Arbitrary Detention, which cited violations of his right to a fair trial.<sup>101</sup>
260. Justice Afiuni released Cedeño because he had been in pre-trial detention for nearly three years, which was in violation of a two-year limit prescribed by Venezuelan law. As a result, Justice Afiuni was charged with corruption, being an accessory to escape, criminal conspiracy and abuse of power. In addition to these charges, she has been denied a public defender. Appearing before Government officials and broadcast on national television and radio, Venezuelan President, Hugo Chávez, demanded that Justice Afiuni be sentenced to a 30-year prison term, even if new legislation was required to achieve that result. He also suggested that he had instructed the Attorney General and the President of the Supreme Court to punish Justice Afiuni as severely as possible to prevent similar actions by other judges.<sup>102</sup>
261. Justice Afiuni was imprisoned. She was given a conditional release by the Tribunal 17 de Juicio de Caracas on June 14, 2013. Reports indicate that her

Promoting the Rule of Law

262. The rule of law is fundamental to creating an environment for peace, liberty and freedom. It is the foundation upon which the judicial system is built.

Colombia

Judge Diego Fernando Escobar Munera

263. The growing violence against judges prompted the Law Society to intervene on behalf of Justice Diego Fernando Escobar Munera who was murdered in broad day light in the city of Medellin while waiting for a taxi. Justice Munera spent 19 years in the judiciary. He was known for his transparency, honesty and dedication to justice. His death was linked to the systematic targeting of judges.<sup>103</sup>

Pakistan

Asma Jahangir

264. On July 3, 2012, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Asma Jahangir, a prominent human rights lawyer. Persons within Pakistan's military and intelligence agencies plotted to kill her. As an advocate of the Supreme Court of Pakistan and President of Supreme Court Bar Association of Pakistan, Asma Jahangir tirelessly promotes the rule of law. She established an independent Human Rights Commission of Pakistan and AGHS Legal Aid, the first free legal aid centre in Pakistan.

265. In addition, she was the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Extrajudicial, Arbitrary and Summary Executions from 1998 to 2004 and the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Freedom of Religion or Belief from 2004 to 2010. Asma Jahangir acted as a defence lawyer for Husain Haqqani, Pakistan's ambassador to the United States who was forced to resign by the Pakistani military. She was targeted because of her human rights work and dedication to promoting the rule of law in Pakistan.<sup>104</sup>

Challenging Corruption

266. When judges challenge corruption, they are working to ensure the efficacy and integrity of the judicial system. There can be no access to justice if the judicial system is corrupt.

Brazil

Threats against Brazilian Judges

267. In November 2011, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Brazilian judges who face threats of violence, attempted assassinations, disappearances and assassination. Many of Brazil's judges are working under a climate of intimidation and insecurity. Justice Patricia Aicoli was murdered by masked assailants. She was shot 21 times in front of her home in Niteroi, Rio de Janeiro. Her murder is reported to be in retaliation for her adjudication in the trials and convictions of members of the "Milicias" and in particular the murder investigation of an 18 year-old man that involved several police officers. Justice Aicoli was known for her tough stance against police corruption.<sup>105</sup>

Pakistan

Chaudhry Zulfiqar Ali

268. In July 2013, the Law Society sent a letter of intervention regarding the death of Chaudhry Zulfiqar Ali, Chief Prosecutor and former Deputy Director of the Federal Investigation Agency ("FIA"). He was shot in his car by unidentified assailants, near his home in Islamabad.<sup>106</sup>

<sup>106</sup> Law Society of Upper Canada, Report to Convocation, by Equity and Aboriginal Issues Committee (Toronto: Law Society of Upper Canada, 27 June 2013) at 5 – 7.

269. Chaudhry Zulfiqar Ali had a reputation for determinedly pursuing cases against suspects with powerful and sometimes militant connections, despite receiving repeated death threats. In his roles both as deputy director and chief prosecutor at the FIA, he was heavily involved with several high profile and dangerous prosecutions. He acted as the government's lead prosecutor in the 2008 terrorist attack in Mumbai, India, which killed 166 people. The investigation into this case involved a probe into several members of the Lashkar-e-Taiba militant group, which was ongoing at the time of his murder.
270. He was also leading the prosecution against suspects in the 2007 assassination of former Pakistani Prime Minister, Benazir Bhutto. In connection with this case, the prosecutor was pursuing charges against several suspected Taliban militants, and had also recently ordered the arrest of former military ruler Pervez Musharraf. It is speculated in various news outlets that Chaudhry Zulfiqar Ali's killing may be connected to his involvement in these two particularly high profile cases.<sup>107</sup>

International Human Rights Advocates Expanding Access to Justice

271. Expanding access to justice is precarious work for many lawyers and judges in their countries. Tracking the whereabouts of human rights advocates and judges is difficult. Often these individuals go into hiding or have been disappeared. However, sometimes news reports or letters from the lawyers or judges families provide information into where the lawyers or judges are and how they are continuing their work of expanding access to justice.

China

Chen Guangcheng

272. In 2006, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Chen Guangchen, the human rights lawyer who is blind, who is known for advocating for women's rights, land rights and the welfare of the poor. Today, he is living outside of China. After escaping China to the American Embassy in Beijing, Chen Guangchen has been living in the United States where he has been granted asylum. For one year, he was a fellow at New York University and is now a visiting fellow at the Catholic University of America.<sup>108</sup> He continues to lecture and speak out on human rights issues and the need for legal reform in support of China's vulnerable populations.

Iran

Nasarin Sotoudeh

273. On January 13, 2013, Nasrin Sotoudeh, who was sentenced to a total of 11 years in prison and banned from both practicing law and leaving Iran for 20 years, was temporarily freed after spending more than two years in jail. She was reunited with her husband and two young children.<sup>109</sup> Nasarin Sotoudeh was among 11 political prisoners freed by the Iranian government. The year before,

This came days after a video of her voicing support for what she called "prisoners of conscience" was posted online. Nasarin Sotoudeh considers the summons to be illegal and has chosen not to comply at this time.<sup>110</sup>

Shirin Ebadi

275. In June 2008, the Law Society intervened on behalf of Shirin Ebadi. Four years later, she was awarded a degree of Doctor of Laws, honoris causa (LLD) by the Law Society during the June 15, 2012 Call to the Bar ceremony. Shirin Ebadi continues to speak out in defence of human rights and democracy.

Zimbabwe

Beatrice Mtetwa

276. In April 2013, The Law Society intervened on Beatrice Mtetwa's behalf. Beatrice Mtetwa, a prominent human rights lawyer and the former president of the Law Society of Zimbabwe, was arrested while attempting to assist her clients on March 17, 2013. She was released from prison on March 25, 2013.
277. In June 2013, she was tried for obstructing justice and being unruly to the police. Zimbabwe's prosecutors alleged that her shouting "'at the top of her voice,' saying what the police were doing was 'unconstitutional, illegal and unlawful,'" was preventing the police from doing their job. On November 26, 2013, the court dismissed the charges and stated that her presence did not prevent the police from doing their job.<sup>111</sup>

Responses to the Law Society's Interventions

278. From time to time, the Law Society receives responses to its intervention efforts.<sup>112</sup> Numerous lawyers from foreign countries have noted that public interventions from organizations such as the Law Society are helpful in informing the community that human rights violations of lawyers and judges do not go unnoticed.
279. The Law Society intervened in Justice Afiuni's case and received acknowledgements of the intervention. On December 9, 2009, Judge Maria Lourdes Afiuni was arrested by intelligence officers in Venezuela after ordering the conditional release pending trial of Eligion Cedeño.
