FOR DECISION

PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT ON LANGUAGE RIGHTS

MOTION

2. That Convocation approve the amendments to the Rules of Professional Conduct as set out in Tab 2.1.

INTRODUCTION

3. The Committee is recommending amendments to Rules 3.2-2A and 3.2-2B that deal with language rights. A blackline version of the amendments to the Rules and a version showing changes incorporated into the Rules at Tabs 2.1.1 and 2.1.2, respectively.

RATIONALE

4. At June 2015 Convocation, when Rules 3.2-2A and 3.2-2B were adopted, the Chair of the Committee agreed to review suggestions for further changes. The recommendations in this report deal with these changes.

DISCUSSION

6. Prior to the June 2015 amendments, language rights were the subject of Commentary to Rule 2.1-1.

7. Now, Rule 3.2-2A provides that “a lawyer shall, when appropriate, advise a client of the client’s language rights, including the right to proceed in the official language of the client’s choice”. New Rule 3.2-2B provides “when a client wishes to retain a lawyer for representation in the official language of the client’s choice, the lawyer shall not undertake the matter unless the lawyer is competent to provide the required service in that language.”
8. New commentary to the Rules refers to aboriginal language rights. Paragraph [2] provides “the lawyer should also be aware that provincial or territorial legislation may provide additional language rights, including in relation to aboriginal languages”.

9. At Convocation in June, 2015, it was suggested that there be more explicit reference to aboriginal language rights in the Rules. It was also suggested that the reference to “official language of the client’s choice” in Rules 3.2-2A and 3.2-2B could be interpreted as referring only to English and French. The Official Languages Act (Canada) provides that English and French are official languages. ¹ In contrast, the Official Languages Act of the North-West Territories, provides that there are eleven official languages. ²

10. The Committee considered these issues and proposes that Rule 3.2-2A be amended to provide as follows:

3.2-2A A lawyer shall, when appropriate, advise a client of the client’s language rights, including the right to use

(i) the official language of the client’s choice; and

(ii) a language recognized in provincial or territorial legislation as a language in which a matter may be pursued, including, where applicable, aboriginal languages”.

11. The Committee is proposing to refer to a client’s “right to use” a language rather than the client’s “right to proceed” in a language, as the Committee is of the view that this amendment would enhance the readability of the Rules.

12. Rule 3.2-2B continues to emphasize that a lawyer must be competent in the language in the language in which the lawyer provides services to the client. The Committee proposes to amend the Rule 3.2-2B to require the lawyer to obtain the consent of the client in the event that the client wishes to retain a lawyer who is not able to represent him or her in the client’s language of choice. This amendment is intended to provide additional guidance to lawyers.

13. A blackline, showing changes that would be made to the Rules of Professional Conduct, is attached as Tab 2.1.1. A clean version is shown at Tab 2.1.2.

Language Rights

3.2-2A A lawyer shall, when appropriate, advise a client of the client’s language rights, including the right to use the right to proceed in the official language of the client’s choice.

(i) the official language of the client’s choice; and

(ii) a language recognized in provincial or territorial legislation as a language in which a matter may be pursued, including, where applicable, aboriginal languages.

3.2-2B When a client proposes to use a language to retain a lawyer for representation in the official language of his or her choice, the lawyer is not competent in that language to provide the required services, the lawyer shall not undertake the matter unless the lawyer is otherwise able to competently provide the required services and the client consents in writing in that language.

Commentary

[1] The lawyer should advise the client of the client’s language rights as soon as possible.

[2] The choice of official language is that of the client not the lawyer. The lawyer should be aware of relevant statutory and constitutional law relating to language rights including the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms, s. 19(1) and Part XVII of the Criminal Code regarding language rights in courts under federal jurisdiction and in criminal proceedings. The lawyer should also be aware that provincial or territorial legislation may provide additional language rights, including in relation to aboriginal languages.

[3] When a lawyer considers whether to provide the required services in the language chosen by the client, the lawyer should carefully consider whether it is possible to render those services in a competent manner as required by Rule 3.1-2 and related Commentary.

FOR DECISION

NEW PROCESS FOR ADMINISTRATIVE SURRENDER OF LICENCE

MOTION

14. That Convocation approve in principle a new process which would permit a licensee to surrender their licence in the face of a Law Society investigation or discipline proceeding.

RATIONALE

15. Enhancing the efficiency of the Law Society’s discipline process by avoiding or shortening hearings, where appropriate, was one of Convocation’s priorities for the 2011-2015 bencher term.¹

16. The proposal would, if approved, permit a licensee to apply to surrender their licence in the face of regulatory proceedings in certain circumstances. If Law Society staff agree, the application would be referred to the summary order bencher, who may approve or deny the application. This would be a new administrative process which is distinct from the Tribunal’s authority to order a surrender of license in the discipline process.

17. Enabling provisions in the by-laws would be prepared for Convocation’s approval at a later date.

18. The advantages of the process are:
   a. a reduction in time and resources required to terminate a licence;
   b. the creation of additional options for licensees who may wish to surrender their licence, but cannot do so due to ongoing investigations or discipline; and
   c. termination of licence in circumstances where it might otherwise be difficult to achieve this result through the disciplinary process

19. The Paralegal Standing Committee considered the proposal at its September 9 meeting and agrees that it be recommended to Convocation for its consideration.

BACKGROUND

20. Discipline proceedings are the most serious response to lawyer or paralegal misconduct. These proceedings can be lengthy, costly, and only address the specific issues being adjudicated. In that sense, discipline is a blunt instrument.

21. Currently, administrative surrender of licence is not available to licensees who are in the investigation or discipline process. A new process to permit administrative surrender of licence in the face of regulatory proceedings would be distinct from other types of surrender of licence. A surrender of licence without discipline penalty has a number of advantages, including certainty, finality, timeliness and efficiency.

22. There are some licensees who have engaged in misconduct and are not interested in practising law or providing legal services in the future. Their conduct might not result in licence revocation through the discipline process, but they may be willing to surrender their licence voluntarily, outside of the discipline process. In some circumstances, the public interest may not require a prosecution. Licensees may not be well suited to the practice of law, or they may be close to retirement and experiencing difficulty in their practice after an unblemished career. The public may be better served by removing the licensee from practice than by pursuing a finding of misconduct.

23. The Law Society would use such a process in a manner consistent with its duties to protect the public interest and to act in a timely, open and efficient manner.

24. The following describes the proposed surrender process. It does not require changes to the Law Society Act and could be implemented with changes to the By-Laws. While the process would save resources, its suitability in a given case would not be based on expediency, but protection of the public interest.

DISCUSSION

25. Two principles guide this proposal.

26. In considering an application for surrender of licence in the context of the Law Society’s duty to ensure public confidence in its ability to regulate the profession, the first principle would be to ensure that the information to be published about the decision is sufficient to enable the public to understand the allegations and the reasons for granting the licensee permission to surrender their licence.

27. The second principle to be considered by the Society upon receipt of an application for surrender of licence is whether the surrender process is in the public interest in the particular case. Factors to be considered would include a. the need to complete the investigation; and
b. the public interest in a full hearing of the allegations.

Surrender Process

28. The three key stages in the proposed process are a. consideration by Law Society staff, which may involve negotiation with the licensee, and ensuring that the application is complete;
b. referral to the decision-maker, who would be the summary order bencher;
c. publication of a record of the decision, including an agreed statement of facts.

29. The process would be relevant to circumstances in which a licensee has engaged in misconduct and is not interested in practicing law or providing legal services in the future. Their conduct might not result in licence revocation through the discipline process, but some may be willing to voluntarily surrender their license, outside the discipline process.

30. The Society would use the process in a manner that is consistent with its duty to protect the public interest as well as to act in a timely, open and efficient manner.

31. A circumstance in which a licensee is failing to respond to, or cooperate with, the Law Society would not generally be appropriate for this process.

Description of the Process

32. Any licensee who is under investigation or is the subject of discipline hearings may apply to surrender their license under this process.

33. To initiate the process, the licensee would submit a written application to surrender to the Law Society on a prescribed form, which requires the licensee to provide certain information.

34. The licensee and the Law Society would have to agree on a written description of the facts. This written description would be part of the application record. If the application is accepted, the statement of facts would be public, and the statement or a summary would be published on the Law Society’s website.

35. As part of its consideration of a licensee’s application to surrender, it would be recommended that the licensee receive Independent Legal Advice.

36. The Society would have the ability to seek costs as part of the surrender process. These costs might be sought at the time of surrender, or be payable prior to any application for licensing in the future. It is possible that imposition of costs may discourage some licensees from reapplying for their licence following surrender.

37. The application to surrender would be considered, in writing only, by the summary order bencher. The question for decision would be whether the application is accepted or rejected. In making this decision, the summary order bencher would take into consideration the need to ensure public confidence in the Law Society and the protection of the public in the public interest.

38. If the application is accepted, the surrender would be processed by the Law Society as a licence surrender in the normal course. If the application is refused, the investigation and/or discipline proceeding would continue in the normal course. There is no appeal from this decision.

39. The fact that the licensee has been granted permission to surrender their licence, and an agreed statement of facts, would be published and available in the public register.

40. If a licence granted permission to surrender wishes to apply for a licence in the future, they would have to meet certain conditions to be described in by-laws.

Current Regulatory Framework and Required Amendments

41. Section 30 (1) of the Law Society Act provides that a licensee may apply to the Law Society to surrender their licence in accordance with the by-laws. Section 62(0.1)35 of the Act provides that Convocation may make by-laws governing applications to surrender a licence under s. 30.

42. Part III of By-Law 4 currently provides a regulatory framework for an application to surrender a licence, but does not address the proposed process. Under subsection 26(3) of the By-Law, the Society cannot consider an application for surrender if the applicant is the subject of an audit, investigation, search or seizure by the Law Society, or is a party to a discipline proceeding. Amendment to Part III of By-Law 4 would be required to permit a licensee to surrender in these circumstances, if the proposal is approved.

43. Part III of By-Law 8 governs the information that is made available regarding licensees on the public register. This would require amendment.
44. Part II of By-Law 4 specifies current requirements for licensing. The Committee will consider new By-law requirements that may be appropriate for those who have surrendered a licence under this proposal and subsequently reapply to the Society for licensing. For example, a time restriction following the surrender may be considered appropriate.
Summary

45. The amended 2015 Lawyer Annual Report and the 2015 Class L3 Canadian Legal Advisor Annual Report, shown at TAB 2.3.1 and 2.3.2, are provided for Convocation’s information.

46. Subsection 5(1) of By-Law 8 requires that every licensee file a report with the Law Society by March 31 of each year, in respect of the licensee’s professional business during the preceding year; and the licensee’s other activities during the preceding year related to the licensee’s practice of law or the provision of legal services. The reporting form is called the Lawyer Annual Report.

47. The major substantive change to the 2015 Lawyer Annual Report and Class L3 Canadian Legal Advisor Annual Report involves the Law Foundation of Ontario (LFO) Form 1 questions, solely relating to mixed trust accounts, being incorporated into Section G – Financial Reporting as part of Question 5B. The mixed trust account information was previously collected separately by both the Law Society and the LFO. The Law Society did not previously collect the information contained in Questions 5B(i), (ii), (iii), (iv) and (v).

Reasons for the Change

48. Subsections 57(1) and 57(3) of the Law Society Act require that all interest from money held in a mixed trust account be paid to the Law Foundation of Ontario (LFO). Subsection 2(1) of Regulation 709 of the Revised Regulations of Ontario requires a licensee to file a report (Form 1) with the LFO with respect to every mixed trust account by March 31 each year.

49. LFO’s main source of revenue is interest received from licensees’ mixed trust accounts. The LFO collects information annually about mixed trusts accounts using the Form 1. The Form 1 is currently filed electronically through the LSUC Portal, usually at the same time that a licensee submits his/her annual report.

50. The Form 1 process is the primary way that the LFO ensures that all mixed trust accounts are being reported.

51. The integration of Form 1 into the annual report process is expected to increase compliance with the Law Foundation’s information requirements and help ensure that interest revenue from mixed trust accounts is directed to the LFO. Additionally, integration will:
   a. facilitate the ability of licensees to fulfill statutory obligations;
   b. reduce the number of follow-up emails and calls that are made each year to licensees who have failed to file a separate Form 1;
c. ease the reporting burden of licensees by eliminating a second mandatory report with partially overlapping information;
d. capture more complete and accurate data while using fewer resources.
e. promote increased compliance by financial institutions; and
f. support processes to ensure revenues to the LFO are maximized for access to justice objectives.

2.2 – Complaints Resolution

Graph 2.2E: Aging of Active Complaints

Cases which have been in the process longer than 12 months are closely monitored. In almost all instances, the case is in this category due to reasons beyond the control of the Law Society. Cases are usually older than 12 months in Complaints Resolution for the following reasons:

- Newer complaints against the lawyer/paralegal are received. In some cases existing cases await the completion of younger cases relating to the same licensee;
- Delays on the part of licensees in providing representations and in responding to the investigators’ requests. In a number of instances, the Summary Hearing process is required;
- Delays on the part of complainants in responding to licensee’s representations and to investigators’ requests for additional information; and
- New issues raised by the complainant requiring additional investigation.

2.3 – Investigations

Graph 2.3E: Aging of Active Complaints

(a) Core Cases

While the department strives to reduce the proportion of cases in the older time frame and to increase the proportion of cases in the youngest time frame, it is recognized that there are cases that are older than 18 months in Investigations for the following reasons:

- The investigator has to wait for evidence from a third party (i.e. not the complainant or the licensee/subject), for example psychiatric evaluation, court transcripts, or a key witness;
- Newer complaints are received against the licensee/subject. In order to move forward together to the Proceedings Authorization Committee, the older cases await the completion of younger cases;
- A need to coordinate investigations between different licensees/subject where the issues arise out of the same set of circumstances (e.g. a complainant complains about 2 lawyers in relation to the same matter);
- Multiple cases involve one lawyer. These investigations are complex and time consuming;
- Where capacity issues are raised during a conduct investigation.
2.3 – Investigations

(b) Mortgage Fraud Cases

As noted above, the department strives to reduce the proportion of mortgage fraud cases in the older time frame and to increase the proportion of cases in the youngest time frame. However, it is recognized that there will always be mortgage fraud cases that are older than 18 months in Investigations for the reasons cited above, particularly:

- When newer complaints against the licensee/subject are received, existing investigations may have to await their completion in order that all the cases can be taken to Proceedings Authorization Committee together.
- There is a need to coordinate investigations between different licensees/subject where the issues arise out of the same set of circumstances (e.g. a complainant complains about 2 lawyers in relation to the same matter).
- There are multiple cases involve one lawyer resulting in greater complexity.

There were no new UAP enforcement matters commenced in Q2 2015. As at June 30, 2015, there was 1 active UAP matter.

8 “Closed” refers to completed investigations and therefore consists of both those investigations that were closed by the Law Society and those that were referred for prosecution/injunctive relief.
Of the 40 decisions rendered in Q2 2015, the Commissioner referred 1 file back to Professional Regulation. While satisfied that the decision to close was reasonable, the Commissioner referred the case back citing procedural concerns.

“Input” refers to complaints that were transferred into Discipline from various other departments during the specific quarter. Includes new complaints/cases received in Discipline and the lawyers/applicants to which the new complaints relate.

The value in each bar represents the inventory at the end of the period.

Graph 2.6C: Inventory of Discipline Matters

Consists primarily of complaints and lawyers/applicants that are in scheduling and are with the Hearing Division or on appeal. Note that a lawyer/applicant who has more than one matter will only be counted once.

A licensee may have more than one matter ongoing at a time (e.g. a licensee may have an ongoing hearing before the Hearing Division and a judicial review in Divisional Court).

* Matters which are initiated by Notice of Application include conduct, capacity, non-compliance and competency matters. Also included in this category are interlocutory suspension/restriction motions.

 Matters which are initiated by Notice of Referral for Hearing include licensing (including re-licensing matters), reinstatement and restoration matters.

The numbers in each bar indicate the number of notices issued and, in brackets, the number of cases relating to those notices. One notice may relate to more than one case. For example, in Q2 2015, 32 Notices of Application were issued (relating to 67 cases) and 2 Notices of Referral for Hearing were issued (relating to 3 cases).

With respect to the 32 Notices of Application\(^{12}\)/Notices of Motion for Interim Suspension Order and 1 Notice of Referral for Hearing (licensing matter) which were issued in Q2 2015:

- 82% were issued within 60 days of PAC Authorization;
- 91% were issued within 90 days of PAC Authorization.

\(^{12}\) Notices of Application are issued with respect to conduct, competency, capacity and non-compliance matters and require authorization by the Proceedings Authorization Committee (PAC).

ALTERNATIVE BUSINESS STRUCTURES WORKING GROUP REPORT – NEXT STEPS

INTRODUCTION

53. This status report from the Alternative Business Structures (ABS) Working Group (“Working Group”) provides Convocation with the initial conclusions and intended next steps of the Working Group as it continues its study of ABSs in Ontario.¹

SUMMARY OF INITIAL CONCLUSIONS AND NEXT STEPS

54. On September 27, 2012, the Working Group’s Terms of Reference were reported to Convocation. The Terms of Reference appear at Tab 2.5.1. The Terms of Reference provided, amongst other things, that the Working Group would:
   a. inform itself on developments in Canada and abroad including on new and existing alternative legal service delivery models and structures;
   b. develop a set of criteria to assess and prioritize new models and structures;
   c. determine the range of legal service delivery models and financing arrangements that should be explored;
   d. identify legal services delivery models and regulatory changes that should be considered by the Law Society for possible implementation based on initial assessment of their impacts and consultation; and
   e. report the results of its work to Convocation, including, as appropriate, proposals and recommendations for next steps.

55. In September of 2014, the Working Group released a Discussion Paper on potential models for ABS in Ontario. In the Discussion Paper, the Working Group introduced the following four models (“the Four Models”):

   Model #1: Business entities providing legal services only in which individuals and entities who are not licensed by the Law Society can have up to 49 per cent ownership;

   Model #2: Business entities providing legal services only with no restrictions on ownership by individuals and entities who are not licensed by the Law Society;

Model #3: Business entities providing both legal and non-legal services (except those identified as posing a regulatory risk) in which individuals and entities who are not licensed by the Law Society would be permitted up to 49 per cent ownership; and

Model #4: Business entities providing both legal and non-legal services (except those identified as posing a regulatory risk) in which individuals and entities who are not licensed by the Law Society would be permitted unlimited ownership.

56. Based on its work to date, the Working Group does not propose to further examine any majority or controlling non-licensee ownership models for traditional law firms in Ontario at this time. Such non-licensee ownership levels do not appear to be warranted based on current information when the potential benefits to such external ownership levels are weighed against the regulatory risks and regulatory proportionality. However, the Working Group will continue its mandate by exploring and assessing other potential ABS options.

57. There are further legal service delivery models and financing arrangements that remain to be explored and assessed for possible implementation. Specifically, the Working Group believes that more limited non-licensee ownership models for traditional law firms merit further study, and that there are certain tailored ABS models which should be considered in depth, based on criteria identified by the Working Group and in consideration of the responses to its September 2014 Discussion Paper.

58. Accordingly, the Working Group will continue its work by:

a. Informing itself on on-going developments in Canada and abroad on new and existing alternative legal service delivery models and structures, financing arrangements, and the related regulatory processes;

b. Considering the level, if any, and nature of non-licensee minority ownership of law firms and entities, including those offering enhanced multi-disciplinary services, that should be permitted;

c. Considering the nature, if any, of franchise arrangements that should be permitted;

d. Considering whether there may be an opportunity to develop an access to justice focused ABS framework (sometimes called ABS+) to enable civil society organizations, such as charities, not-for-profits, and trade unions, to become owners of entities in order to facilitate access to legal services;

e. Considering how the Law Society may facilitate innovation in the delivery of legal services by permitting alternative business structures where legal services are not generally being provided by lawyers and paralegals with the goal of enhancing access to justice for Ontarians and regulating more effectively and efficiently and in proportion to the Law Society’s regulatory objectives; and

f. Considering the criteria that should be considered when determining whether a particular business structure should not be permitted taking into account regulatory risk and advancement of the public interest.

g. Consulting further with the professions and other interested parties at the appropriate time including on:

   i. the appropriate level and nature of minority ownership that might be generally permitted;

   ii. the appropriate types of franchise agreements that might be available;

   iii. a possible framework or frameworks for permitting majority external ownership for civil society entities delivering services dedicated to facilitating access to legal services; and

   iv. a possible framework or frameworks for permitting alternative business structures in areas not generally being served by lawyers and paralegals.

59. The Working Group will continue to report to Convocation through the Professional Regulation Committee with information updates on its continued study and consultation. If appropriate, any proposals for consideration will also be brought to Convocation for its consideration.

BACKGROUND

60. As reported to Convocation in its earlier reports, the term “alternative business structures” may be used to refer to any form of non-traditional business structure, as well as alternative means of delivering legal services, and may include, for example:

   a. alternative ownership structures, such as non-lawyer or non-paralegal investment or ownership of law firms, including equity;

   b. firms offering legal services together with other professionals; and

   c. firms offering an expanded range of products and services, such as “do it yourself” automated legal forms as well as more advanced applications of technology and business processes.

61. The Working Group was created in 2012 to study business structures and law firm financing, which was identified as a priority by Convocation for the 2011-2015 bencher term. As Convocation’s April 2012 work plan for this priority highlighted, rapid changes in legal regulation, and the emergence of ABSs in other jurisdictions prompted consideration by the Law Society of ABSs and law firm ownership and financing.

62. Since then, the Working Group has engaged in an extensive review of the issues related to ABS by:
   a. engaging in an ongoing fact-finding exercise that has included studying reports and scholarly articles, and meeting with ABS experts from various jurisdictions, including Australia, England and Wales and the United States;
   b. meeting with members of the professions (Summer 2013);
   c. commissioning a paper by Professors Edward M. Iacobucci and Michael Trebilcock of the University of Toronto Faculty of Law entitled An Economic Analysis of Alternative Business Structures for the Practice of Law for a symposium on ABS (October 2013);
   d. holding a symposium on ABS attended by lawyers and paralegals from diverse practices and regions (October 2013);
   e. seeking input from the professions on potential models for ABS through the release of a Discussion Paper (September 2014);
   f. meeting with numerous legal groups, organizations and associations (August 2013 to February 2015); and
   g. considering the over 40 responses received in response to its Discussion Paper and reporting on the call for input in February 2015.

63. A selection of background reading materials, the Iacobucci and Trebilcock paper, the webcast of the October 2013 ABS Symposium, the September 2014 Discussion Paper and responses and previous reports of the Working Group to Convocation can be found on the Law Society’s ABS webpage at http://lsuc.on.ca/abs/.

DISCUSSION

Criteria for Analyzing ABS Options

64. As the Working Group reflected on the responses to the Discussion Paper and considered next steps, it returned to the criteria, established to guide its study of potential models for ABS, which are set out in the Working Group’s February 2014 Report to Convocation (the “February 2014 Report”). The criteria, which are considered below, are as follows:

   a. Access to justice: Any structural and related regulatory changes concerning alternative business structures should be reviewed to determine their effect on access to justice. Solutions that provide potential improvements for access to justice should be given more weight on that basis.

   b. Responsive to the public: In promoting access, the new structures and processes should be responsive to the needs of the public for legal services including greater flexibility in cost, location and availability of legal and other services with appropriate quality and adequate financial assurance of legal services.
c. Professionalism: The fundamentals of professionalism, including independence, confidentiality, avoidance of conflict of interest, and candour should be safeguarded in any move to liberalize ownership and structure.

d. Protection of Solicitor-Client Privilege: Any change proposed to implement alternative business structures must not jeopardize the protection of solicitor-client privilege.

e. Promote Innovation: New business structures and processes should be designed to promote innovation which may include, among other things, the adoption of technology and/or other business processes that will enable them to adapt to the legal services marketplace and to better serve the public.

f. Alignment of requirements with new directions taken: The Law Society's current rules and by-laws should be aligned with the objective to promote innovation and flexibility in the provision of legal services to the public. Rules and other requirements should be proportionate to the significance of the regulatory objectives.

g. Orderly Transition: The preferred alternative business structures or related solutions options should be amenable to an orderly and thoughtful transition to new regulatory models. Any plan for new structures or service models should be inclusive, responsible, and mindful of any necessary disruptions that may be occasioned.

h. Efficient and Proportionate Regulation: Any changes should improve the Law Society's ability to effectively protect and promote the public interest in competent and ethical practices, including appropriate responses to client complaints. Restrictions on who may provide legal services should be proportionate to the significance of the regulatory objectives.

65. The Working Group reviewed these criteria and determined that they remain relevant and appropriate, with two modifications. First, the Working Group considers that “competence” “integrity”, and “service to the public good through client relationships and responsibilities to the administration of justice” should expressly be included among the indicia of “professionalism”. Second, it concludes that paragraph f. should be removed as innovation and proportionality are already stand-alone criteria.

66. As a result, the revised criteria to evaluate ABS are:
   a. Access to justice
   b. Responsive to the public
   c. Professionalism

d. Protection of Solicitor-Client Privilege
e. Promote Innovation
f. Orderly Transition; and
g. Efficient and Proportionate Regulation.

67. As the Working Group indicated in its February 2014 Report, “not all criteria will apply to all options, or they may apply at different stages of the ABS project, however, where relevant, they are of assistance to ensure a comprehensive analysis.”\(^3\)

The Four Models

68. In the September 2014 Discussion Paper, the Working Group set out the Four Models as options for consideration as permissible regulatory structures, and issued the Discussion Paper to obtain feedback on whether the Law Society should undertake any change respecting ABS, particularly with respect to the degree to which non-licensees should be permitted ownership in the business structure and/or the extent to which non-legal services might be provided to clients within the business structure.

69. The Four Models, which were presented to stimulate discussion and which were not exhaustive,\(^4\) offered different options on ownership levels and multidisciplinary practice, which are the two major policy issues arising in the consideration of ABS. Each of the Four Models would either permit minority ownership by non-licensees up to 49% or unrestricted ownership. Two of the models would permit the provision of both legal and non-legal services.

Non-Licensee Ownership Issues for Consideration

70. There are two main potential benefits to external ownership that the Four Models sought to explore: increased access to expertise, and increased access to capital.

71. New non-licensee owners can bring new expertise in areas such as marketing, new client development, design, project management, information technology or strategic planning.

72. Permitting non-licensee ownership increases access to capital. As the Working Group’s prior Reports to Convocation note, with increased capital should come the increased ability to:
   a. Invest in talent by hiring new licensees and non-legal staff, and/or rewarding key employees, including non-licensees;
   b. Expand (through opening of new locations, acquiring other firms, and/or entering new practice areas);

\(^3\) February 2014 Report to Convocation at para. 90.
\(^4\) Discussion Paper at page 22.
c. Invest in knowledge management, technology, and business process innovations to enhance quality and/or scale operations; and
d. Otherwise market and professionalize the business processes of law.5

73. Franchise arrangements offer similar opportunities by allowing access through the franchise system to legal, technological, business and marketing expertise, processes and brand by franchise fee payments rather than through equity investment. Currently franchise arrangements are not permitted in Ontario under either the Law Society Act or the By-Laws. Traditional franchise arrangements involving non-licensee ownership likely offend various professional conduct rules, such as, for example, referral fee and fee sharing rules.

74. In England and Wales, Quality Solicitors provides an example. The potential benefits of franchise systems for licensees and the general public were first raised at the summer 2013 meetings with the professions and its October 2013 ABS Symposium.6 The franchise model was expressly recommended by one response to the Discussion Paper.

75. However, as the Working Group recognized in its February 2015 Report to Convocation, most responses to the Discussion Paper expressed major concerns about introducing certain types of ABSs in Ontario, such as publicly listed law firms and other types of firms owned or controlled by non-licensees. Some were opposed to majority or unrestricted non-licensee ownership, but would consider relatively small minority ownership levels.

76. There were many different rationales provided by the professions as to why law firms with greater than 49% non-licensee ownership levels should be rejected for Ontario. The concerns and risks identified by the responses included the following:
a. External ownership emphasizing profits over professionalism (with detrimental effects potentially including decreases in pro bono initiatives, commoditization of legal work eroding the quality of the work, downloading significant responsibilities onto lower cost clerks or junior counsel, etc.);
b. Difficulties preserving client confidentiality and solicitor-client privilege due to pressure by non-licensee owners to learn about the firm’s cases;
c. Increased risks of conflicts, including conflicts inherent to the structure of certain ABSs when they are owned by non-licensees (such as the example provided by Nick Robinson of the inherent conflict of having an insurance company own a law firm practicing in insurance related areas).7

5 February 2014 Report to Convocation at paras. 127-128.
d. Market consolidation, which could, among other impacts, limit the choice of the public to counsel in certain areas.

77. Several responses cautioned that if any level of non-licensee ownership is permitted, regulation would be required to address areas where non-licensee ownership could create high risks of conflict of interest, such as in personal injury and real estate law.

Non-legal services

78. Two of the Four Models also presented options for providing non-legal services together with legal services. Ontario is well situated to consider further liberalization of the types of non-legal services which may be provided together with services provided by lawyers and paralegals. As the Working Group previously noted, \(^8\) Multi-Discipline Practices (“MDPs”) are already permitted in Ontario, enabling the combination of the provision of legal services and other professional services.\(^9\) Further expanding the types of other services that may be provided to consumers of legal services would represent an incremental development.

79. By expanding on the MDP model, and combining it with greater access to capital, the Law Society could facilitate innovation, the development of more comprehensive and client-tailored services, and new means of addressing access to justice.

80. However, any Law Society effort to unlock gains from enhanced multidisciplinary structures must also consider the attendant risks, which primarily relate to avoiding conflicts of interest, protecting confidentiality and privilege, and protecting the independence of the legal service provider.

Discussion of the Four Models

81. The challenge in exploring ABS ownership models is how to maximize the benefits from external ownership and/or the provision of interdisciplinary services while minimizing regulatory risks. In addressing this challenge, the Working Group considered its criteria against the Four Models.

“Access to Justice” criterion

82. In its study of ABS, the Working Group has given significant consideration to the relationship between the introduction of ABS and access to justice. Its February 2014 Report considered this issue in detail, and noted, inter alia, the following:

a. Many legal needs are not being effectively met through existing business structures.

b. Access to justice is a matter both of the costs of legal services currently being provided and of the legal needs that are not being served (“latent demand for legal services”).

c. Enhancing existing practices could provide the public with better access to legal services. New business models could provide the public with new means of accessing legal services.

83. The Working Group concluded that:

While it would be wrong to suggest that ABSs are a panacea, ABSs may play a part in addressing these legal needs. ABSs may also more efficiently serve these legal needs by allowing clients to better access existing legal services together with other needed services such as, for example, social work and psychological services.

Permitting new models for the delivery of legal services and the practice of law is not the sole, nor likely the most important, solution to issues of access to justice. Lawyers and paralegals will still need to spend time to provide services for their clients, with an attendant cost. ABS models, however, have the potential to enhance access by providing new means of access in addition to the current models, and by providing lawyers and paralegals with additional means to gain efficiency and flexibility, with possible impacts on cost.10

84. In the Working Group’s view, the potential that ABS may facilitate access to justice, even in a limited way, is a reason to continue to consider some type of ABS.

85. One of the access to justice challenges is that the legal nature of everyday legal problems frequently goes unnoticed by Ontarians. In enhanced multidisciplinary service settings, clients seeking assistance in non-legal areas may benefit from the “one stop shop” experience to learn about, and possibly benefit from, legal services available. Multidisciplinary ABSs could provide one avenue to attempt to address Ontario’s unmet civil legal needs challenges.

86. Enhanced multidisciplinary structures may also facilitate access to justice by better serving clients’ legal and non-legal needs. In family law in particular, as responses to the Discussion Paper indicated, there may be opportunities to combine family law services with related services such as financial and counselling services. These models could foster early resolution of disputes where possible, engaging legal, financial, counselling and other services as appropriate.

10 February 2014 Report to Convocation at paras. 119-120.
87. As such, expanding the non-legal services available in a firm structure with appropriate regulatory controls could have positive access to justice impacts. This supports further consideration of interdisciplinary ABS models.

88. However, based on the experience to date in other jurisdictions, the likely access to justice impact does not appear to be sufficient to justify majority non-licensee ownership or effective control, for practices generally.

89. Professors Trebilcock and Iacobucci cautioned at the October 2013 ABS Symposium that introducing ABS options in Ontario likely would not cause dramatic change in how legal services are currently provided by law firms in Ontario.

90. Significant enhanced access to capital would not necessarily mean that innovation will facilitate access to justice. Changed ownership may not change the service delivery model. New investors may find existing well served areas of practice to be more attractive for investment than unserved or underserved areas. Investment in profitable areas of practice may simply result in shifting profits between service providers rather than cost reduction for clients.

91. The experiences in Australia and in England and Wales demonstrate that, while there have been ABSs which facilitate certain forms of access to justice, generally, non-lawyer ownership of law firms in those jurisdictions does not appear to have caused transformative change to facilitate access to justice. To date, ABS has not served as a major catalyst to spark transformative access to justice innovations by regulated entities. In fact, in many instances, non-regulated entities (such as LegalZoom, Axiom, and Neota Logic in the United States) have been major innovators.

92. The regulatory changes required to permit and the consequences of permitting non-lawyer ownership, or effective control, for any and all legal practices do not appear to be justified at least from the perspective of the potential access to justice benefits.

93. ABS is still unfolding in England and Wales, but given what the Working Group has observed to date there and in Australia, there does not appear to be sufficient evidence to warrant introducing transformative change to existing Ontario legal practices in an attempt to achieve major access to justice gains.

94. Access to justice objectives could, however, be pursued through more incremental changes. There are models arising in England and Wales in particular that might be appropriate for Ontario, and which might be achievable through some level of non-licensee minority ownership. Franchise models such as Quality Solicitors, for example, might offer access to justice and other benefits to Ontarians and licensees.
"Responsive to the public" criterion

95. Changes to law firm ownership rules could also lead to the delivery of new responsive means of delivering legal services to the public. While there are some more significant innovators, it is notable that most ABSs in Australia and in England and Wales are existing practices that have taken on limited non-lawyer ownership in order to innovate in ways that may be described as evolutionary rather than revolutionary. From this experience, it appears that innovation in legal service delivery does not depend on non-license majority ownership or control. It is not surprising that service innovation by existing practices is more likely to be gradual than transformative. On the other hand, more significant innovations do appear to be tied to substantial new investment.

96. Enhanced multidisciplinary practices could be more responsive to the public by offering new ways for the public to learn about and use legal services. The “one stop shop” model may also be efficient for consumers of legal and other services.

"Professionalism" criterion

97. The Working Group has heard concerns from some individuals that external ownership would necessarily emphasize profits over professionalism. However, the experiences in Australia and England and Wales to date show that the regulators have developed innovative approaches to safeguard the administration of justice and client interests, such as maintaining confidentiality and solicitor-client privilege, over the interests of shareholders. Similar regulatory structures could be implemented in Ontario to safeguard the unique professional obligations that lawyers and paralegals must fulfill in our justice system.

98. That said, the Working Group agrees that there is not yet sufficient evidence from other jurisdictions from which to make proper judgments about the effect of public ownership on professionalism. The Working Group is of the same view with respect to the effect of substantial market consolidation. While some consider that very large non-licensee owned law firms can deliver more effective and efficient services, others have expressed concern that professionalism will be impaired where individuals are served by such firms. The Working Group considers that the better course is to wait for further experience to develop in other jurisdictions before attempting to reach conclusions as to the effect of public ownership and consolidation on professionalism. In taking this approach, we have recognized that public ownership and consolidation appear to particularly arise in sectors, such as personal injury, where access to justice is more readily available.

99. The Working Group also agrees that the nature of the investor may affect the risk to professionalism. For example, casualty insurers in England have invested in personal injury law firms which could compromise the general approach taken in the representation of injured persons. The same issue is raised in real estate practice if other market participants, such as title insurers and mortgage lenders, were to acquire an interest in real estate practices. An inherent conflict could arise even from a minority interest in the law firm. The Working Group therefore considers that any shift to permit some level of non-licensee ownership should be accompanied by restrictions that protect against inherent conflicts in certain areas of law. The issue of inherent conflict could also apply to franchises, if other market participants with an inherent conflict of interest came forward to establish a franchised network of legal (and possibly other) services.

100. The professionalism issues that may arise in interdisciplinary settings was addressed in the Working Group's February 2014 Report. At that time the Working Group acknowledged that an expanded MDP model may not be appropriate in all circumstances because there "may well be types of services that are inappropriate and likely to increase risk."

101. Having benefitted from the thoughtful responses to its Discussion Paper, the Working Group remains of the view that enhanced multi-disciplinary models should be explored, with further consideration given to the types of services which might not be appropriate to offer in tandem with legal services.

"Protection of Solicitor Client Privilege" criterion

102. The Working Group notes the concerns raised that client confidentiality and solicitor-client privilege would be placed at risk in a firm with non-licensee ownership. While the Working Group continues to believe that appropriate regulatory structures can be developed to address these concerns, experiences in Australia and in England and Wales demonstrate that protecting client confidentiality and solicitor-client privilege in law firms that are majority owned or controlled by non-licensee owners requires significant regulatory resources. Based on currently available information, the benefits of broadly permitting such levels of non-licensee ownership do not appear to justify such intricate regulatory requirements.

103. The Working Group believes that further consideration should be given to whether more proportionate types of regulation might be tailored to permit structures with minority non-licensee ownership, and franchises. The Working Group queries whether such structures might enable licensees and the public to realize some of the benefits of ABS structures in a manner that protects confidentiality and solicitor-client privilege.

104. The Working Group does not have major concerns regarding maintaining solicitor client privilege in multi-disciplinary practices. The Law Society already permits Multi-Discipline Practice and Multi-Discipline Partnership models. Under these existing structures, lawyers and paralegals may form an MDP with professionals who practice a profession, trade or occupation that supports or supplements their services. This structure has not resulted in any difficulties in protecting solicitor-client privilege or client confidentiality. As noted above, however, expansion of the multidisciplinary model would require further consideration regarding how to address the risk of inherent conflicts arising, such as prohibiting some specific combinations of services.

11 February 2014 Report to Convocation at para. 156.
“Promoting Innovation” criterion

105. A key component of ABS is the potential to facilitate innovation, both for access to justice and to enhance the delivery of legal services generally. Indeed, innovation is a necessary driver of advancing access to justice and responsiveness to the public. While many have fairly observed that transformative change has not been experienced as a result of permitting ABS, it does appear that increased innovation has occurred both by ABSs and in reaction to ABSs.

106. The recent 2015 Innovation in Legal Services Report for the Solicitors Regulatory Authority and the Legal Services Board recently conducted the largest study of innovation of legal services of its kind. It concluded that “All else being equal, ABS Solicitors are 13-15% more likely to introduce new legal services.” 12 It concludes that “The implication is that the wider adoption of ABS status would be likely to increase the range of legal services on offer.” 13

107. The study noted that the “major effects of innovation are in extending service range, improving quality, attracting new clients, and improved tailoring of services.” 14 This research therefore suggests that ABS models appear to be the structures that are more likely to bring about such enhancements to the delivery of legal services.

108. However, in England and Wales, the shift towards ABS has been resource intensive for the regulator. To date there are fewer than 500 ABS entities in a market of over 15,000 providers. 15

109. Moreover, the type of innovations occurring are generally moderate. As the 2015 Innovation in Legal Services Report noted:

Innovation is more often than not incremental in nature with very few providers consider[ing] themselves to be radical innovators […] Overall, the impression is of a profession in which ideas for new services and new ways of working are internally generated and rarely radical in nature. 16

110. Perhaps most importantly from the Working Group’s perspective, the innovation observed to date has focused on areas where legal needs are now being served. The Chair of the Legal Services Board has stated that he is “disappointed” that there has been little evidence of legal services providers trying to meet unmet legal needs. 17

111. Although ABSs appear to be innovating more than their non-ABS counterparts, the Working Group is of the view that it is too early to determine whether the levels of innovation taking place in England and Wales support a shift to majority or controlling non-licensee ownership of traditional law firms in Ontario.

112. Nevertheless, the Working Group believes that there are other types of ABS models which warrant exploration and assessment. Consideration should be given to whether a shift to some level of minority non-licensee ownership can facilitate innovation by access to new expertise and additional capital. This is consistent with the observation that innovation by existing practices is likely to be evolutionary and in respect of existing service provision rather than transformative and in unserved areas.

113. It is significant that there is significant ABS innovation occurring in England and Wales involving not-for-profit organizations. For example, a trade union, the British Medical Association, and a charity are all providing legal services through ABSs.

114. Unionline is an ABS that was created by two unions, in order to provide legal services to nearly one million union members. It has a legal advice helpline, provides certain legal services in-house, and will use the unions’ existing panel law firms to serve as the ABS’s agents to deliver more complex legal services to union members. 18 Similarly, the British Medical Association set up an ABS to provide a “one-stop shop” to its 154,000 members. 19

115. As one response to the Discussion Paper highlighted, in Australia the Salvation Army owns two firms. Salvos Legal offers commercial and property legal services. The fees from this practice support its humanitarian law practice, Salvos Legal Humanitarian. Salvos Legal Humanitarian operates as a charity, and provides free legal advice and legal services to vulnerable populations. It has provided legal service in over 7,600 cases. 20 It does so while recognizing client confidentiality, and taking steps to avoid conflicts of interest. 21

116. Salvos Legal Humanitarian describes its clients and approach as follows:

Almost all of the people whom Salvos Legal Humanitarian act for are on Government pensions or are from low income backgrounds and have been unable to access Legal Aid. Certainly none of these people could afford a Lawyer to act on their behalf and in most cases without one, they would very likely be unable to properly fight for their rights in Court.

Salvos Legal Humanitarian has also assisted many families from war-torn and troubled nations around the world to be reunited and to come to a peaceful new home here in Australia.

The aim of Salvos Legal Humanitarian is not only to exist as a law firm. We recognise that the clients who come to us don't only have a legal need but that there are often other complicating factors in their lives.

To this end, Salvos Legal Humanitarian exists to be able to help our clients with their legal needs and to help them engage with other Salvation Army social and pastoral services, such as drug & alcohol recovery, employment assistance, welfare, counselling, financial management and aged care.

Salvos Legal Humanitarian exists to give people a helping hand when they need it most.22

117. England and Wales also permits legal franchises, such as Quality Solicitors, which provide another means of delivering legal services to clients. Quality Solicitors is a network of local law firms. It has over 200 branches, and makes services accessible through telephone and online access points and extended hours. It provides certain fixed fee services, and up front cost estimates for other legal services. It focuses on legal issues facing individuals, as well as business services.23

118. These innovations through ABSs are aimed at providing affordable, accessible legal services. The Working Group is of the view that certain types of ABS may facilitate innovation in the provision of legal services in Ontario, and that this is an important consideration for the future delivery of legal services to those who are currently not served or underserved and in circumstances where geography can affect access to services.

119. Inviting licensees to consider working with a broader range of non-licensees than currently permitted would likely also initiate and facilitate innovation.

22 Ibid.
23 See Quality Solicitors online at <http://www.qualitysolicitors.com/>.
“Orderly Transition” criterion

120. The Working Group agrees that preferred ABS models would need to be introduced in a manner that is mindful of any disruption that a new scheme may cause. Permitting majority non-licensee ownership would represent a major change, requiring significant resources to implement, including legislative reform. The Working Group considers that this criterion militates against implementation of majority or controlling non-licensee ownership levels.

121. On the other hand, some level of minority non-licensee ownership should require more gradual and less resource intensive work to implement. Moreover, and as noted above, a shift towards broader multidisciplinary practice options represents an incremental next step from the current MDP model, which should facilitate an orderly transition to a new regulatory framework.

“Efficient and Proportionate Regulation” criterion

122. As described above, the Working Group is concerned that a shift to generally permitting non-licensee majority ownership or control likely creates disproportionate regulatory complexity and risk when weighed against the likely benefits as currently observed through the ABS experiences in Australia and England and Wales to date.

123. The Working Group also has concerns that a shift to majority external ownership would, if circumstances warranted, be difficult to reverse. For example, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to replace equity investment in a publicly listed law firm, or majority non-licensee owners of a law firm. Indeed, it might not be possible to do so. Replacing minority ownership interests would not present the same degree of difficulty, and could presumably be replaced with licensee equity or with new debt financing.

124. Generally permitting non-licensee majority ownership or control would create a more complex environment with different risks including with respect to supervision, control and liability. Consideration of the issue of client protection through financial assurance would be necessary and would be potentially complex both in terms of minimum mandatory insurance levels as well as coverage where the practice ceases to operate. The burden of designing and implementing new approaches to financial assurance is a regulatory cost to be considered in the balance.

125. In addition, as described in the Professionalism section above, the Australian and England and Wales experiences demonstrate that when 100% non-lawyer ownership occurs, there has been significant market consolidation in the personal injury sector. However, the long term impact of consolidation, both positive and negative, is uncertain. It is difficult to imagine reversing market consolidation if the long term impact is unfavourable. Waiting for evidence to develop in other jurisdictions before making irreversible decisions appears to be the prudent course where the net advantage of broad change is not yet apparent.
The Working Group recognizes that while there may be opportunities to expand the range of services provided with legal services through ABSs, there may be circumstances where regulatory risk would necessitate restrictions. For example, a service that offers real estate brokerage, mortgage lending or title insurance and related legal services would create inherent conflicts with the interests of real estate clients. A company specializing in funding bail bonds also offering criminal defence services would also create inherent conflicts. However, the Working Group is of the view that there may be an opportunity to achieve the numerous benefits that may derive from offering legal services and non-legal services together to the public, in a manner that proportionately regulates the accompanying risks.

Summary

The Working Group evaluated the Four Models in its Discussion Paper based on the criteria established to consider ABSs. Based on the above considerations, which were informed by the responses it received to its Discussion Paper, the Working Group is of the view that majority or controlling non-licensee ownership should not be examined further at this time for traditional law firms. Such non-licensee ownership levels do not appear to be warranted based on current information when the potential benefits to such external ownership levels are weighed against the regulatory risks and regulatory proportionality.

While the Working Group does not rule out the potential of majority non-licensee ownership or control of traditional law firms at some later date, it does not intend to address this more fundamental structural shift at this time. Rather, the Working Group considers that waiting for further evidence from other jurisdictions to develop is the better approach.

Exploring More Targeted ABS Models

Having concluded that generally permitting non-licensee majority ownership or control of traditional law firms should not be further examined at this time, the Working Group considers it appropriate to explore and assess a subset of ABS models which might be applicable to Ontario.

(a) Non-Licensee Minority Ownership of Law Firms and Entities

The Working Group considers that appropriate levels of non-licensee minority ownership of law firms and entities, including those offering expanded multi-disciplinary services, should be explored and assessed. This would include considering whether introducing some level of minority ownership with appropriate regulation may facilitate ABS benefits.

With respect to expanded multi-disciplinary services, the Working Group believes that criteria should be established that would assist in determining which multidisciplinary structures would present unacceptably high regulatory risk taking into account the inherent conflicts and other regulatory issues that arise in specific areas of law.
132. The experience in Australia and in England and Wales is that most ABSs are traditional legal practices that have taken on minority non-lawyer ownership. Minority non-licensee ownership of traditional practices appears to be associated with increased innovation but has not given rise to regulatory issues or the issues raised by publicly owned ABSs or ABSs owned or controlled by non-licensees.

133. While the Working Group is aware of innovations among licensees who are offering new ways to meet the legal needs of individual and corporate clients, it seems appropriate for the Law Society to find ways to encourage further innovation through proportionate regulation.

(b) Franchise Models

134. Similarly the Working Group considers that franchise models should be explored and assessed. Like minority non-licensee ownership of law firms and entities, a franchise model may offer opportunities to traditional practices to innovate, enhance competency, enable a more dedicated focus on the practice of law rather than the business of law and encourage licensees to develop new legal services.

135. For example, a law firm franchisee may benefit from back office support, enhanced referral networks, marketing, and access to specialized expertise. Enabling licensees to access services and expertise through a franchise arrangement without effective loss of control of their practices could be in the public interest, without appearing to raise the regulatory and other issues raised by majority non-licensee ownership models.

(c) ABS+ : Civil Society ABS Owners to Facilitate Access to Justice

136. The Working Group also believes that an ABS+ approach which could permit greater external ownership levels to civil society entities to facilitate access to legal services merits consideration.

137. Some responses to the Working Group’s Discussion Paper suggested that ABS regulation could be developed in a manner to facilitate access to justice and those most in need of legal services. One submission coined the phrase “ABS+”. An ABS+ regulatory approach would build on the following statement by Nick Robinson that was adopted by many responding to the ABS Discussion Paper:

For policymakers the goal should not be deregulation for its own sake, but rather increasing access to legal services that the public can trust delivered by legal service providers who are part of a larger legal community that sees furthering the public good as a fundamental commitment. Carefully regulated non-lawyer ownership may be a part of achieving this larger goal, but only a part.24

138. Although ABS efforts in Australia and England and Wales have not yet led to systemic transformation, there are nevertheless practices which have emerged to provide legal assistance to vulnerable persons, such as Salvos Legal Humanitarian, described above.

139. The adoption of ABS in Australia and in England and Wales was not intended to facilitate access to justice per se. Yet, as the Salvos Legal Humanitarian example demonstrates, ABS created an opportunity for new means of delivering legal services to marginalized, vulnerable populations.

140. The Working Group recognizes that there may be an opportunity to build on the Australia and England and Wales experience in a way that expressly seeks to harness ABS as one means of addressing the major access to justice issues facing Ontario.25

141. Specifically, the Working Group intends to consider whether there may be circumstances where permitting non-licensee ownership from the civil society sectors would open new opportunities for the delivery of legal services, or encourage new ways of delivering legal services to those who are currently unable to access legal services. The issue for the Working Group is whether certain civil society entities, such as charities, not-for-profits, and trade unions, should have the ability, subject to conditions, to own a law firm in order to better serve the needs of those they serve.

142. External ownership by particular civil society groups may be one way of leveraging non-legal networks and expertise to facilitate access to legal services provided by licensees.

143. In addition to changes in ownership levels, the “one stop shop” model, if adopted by civil society organizations, might enable those they serve to access legal services at the same time that they access other services or resources.

144. The Working Group therefore intends to consider eligibility criteria, and how an ABS+ regulatory structure could facilitate access to justice while protecting core professional values.

(d) ABS+ : Promoting Innovation where legal services are not generally being provided by lawyers and paralegals

145. Certain innovations are occurring outside what may be described as the “regulatory sphere”. The Law Society Act provides that, except as permitted by the Law Society, only licensees may provide “legal services” which is a broadly defined term. Section 1(5) of the Act provides that “a person provides legal services if the person engages in conduct that involves the application of legal principles and legal judgment with regard to the circumstances or objectives of a person”. Given the broad definition of legal services and the few exceptions to the licensing requirement, the regulated sphere is very wide but is not fully served by licensees.

146. Certain services are already readily available in Ontario, but are operating outside or on the margins of the regulated sphere. As certain responses to its Discussion Paper note, major disruptive innovations occurring outside of the regulated sphere from outside Ontario are expected to eventually come to Ontario.

147. Moreover, in 2015 Ontario became the home to two legal innovation zones, which will facilitate the development of “radical” or “disruptive” innovations to the provision of legal services. Ryerson launched its Legal Innovation Zone ("LIZ") in 2015. It is “Challenging the status quo of Canada’s legal system”. Its goal is to “foster, support and develop innovative solutions and technologies that will help make Canada’s legal system smarter, faster, better and more accessible.” In launching Ryerson’s LIZ, Ryerson President Sheldon Levy stated “Who knows what the Uber of law will be? No one knows what that will be. But if it happens, I am absolutely sure that it will be here.”

148. Toronto’s MaRS Discovery District launched The MaRS LegalX cluster in 2015, which it describes as follows:

The MaRS LegalX cluster team is dedicated to moving the legal sector forward through enterprises — whether startup or established corporates and law firms. Working at the intersection of high-growth ventures, technology, design and the legal industry, LegalX connects the technologists, designers, engineers and lawyers who are driving change.

149. The Working Group is well aware of the rapid changes taking place in the legal sector, primarily due to technological innovations. Ross Intelligence, for example, is developing a 26 The Legal Innovation Zone at Ryerson, online: <http://www.legalinnovationzone.ca/>.

“digital legal expert” that is powered by Watson, IBM’s “cognitive computer”. The company, which grew out of a University of Toronto / IBM student competition, now has the support of Dentons, a global law firm with offices in Ontario. Just as disruptive technology may enter Ontario’s legal services markets, Ontario based disruptive technologies could enter Ontario's legal services markets, and permeate globally.

150. Two issues broadly arise. The first is that the providers outside of the regulated sphere may be well positioned, if permitted, to provide legal services that are not currently being provided. The second is that the public interest may be served by allowing new providers into the regulated sphere thereby permitting supervision in the public interest. The question is what the Law Society should do to proactively consider their impacts, assess their merits for Ontario’s legal services market and the public interest implications of allowing that to happen.

151. While the Working Group reaffirms its view, first expressed in its February 2014 Report, that these issues be considered separate from consideration of ABS, there is merit in considering whether permitting alternative business structures in unserved and underserved areas usefully addresses these issues.

NEXT STEPS

152. At this point, the Working Group has fulfilled much of the mandate established for its work under its Terms of Reference and by subsequent decisions of Convocation. It has:

   a. Informed itself on developments in Canada and abroad on new and existing alternative legal service delivery models and structures, financing arrangements, and the related regulatory process (Terms of Reference (a));
   b. Considered these developments in light of regulatory requirements and developed criteria to assess and prioritize these new models and structures (Terms of Reference (b)); and
   c. Followed a Work Plan in order to conduct an initial assessment of the impacts of potential ABS arrangements that could be explored, held a high level consultation (as well as other educational and outreach initiatives), and reported its findings to Convocation (Terms of Reference (d)).

153. The Working Group has carefully considered majority non-licensee ownership and control as well as different levels of multidisciplinary and now reports its conclusions to Convocation having explored, assessed and consulted in accordance with the Terms of 29 Ross Intelligence, online: <http://www.rossintelligence.com/>.

Reference in this regard. The Working Group intends to continue its work in accordance with the Terms of Reference as described above.

154. Specifically, the Working Group will monitor on-going ABS developments in Canada and abroad (Terms of Reference (a)) and continue to determine a range of legal service delivery models and economic arrangements that should be explored in more depth and the existing regulatory constraints on delivery models and economic arrangements (Terms of Reference (c)). This exploration will necessarily include consideration of the current regulatory structure and the related Rules and By-Laws regarding fee-sharing, referral fees, direct supervision and ownership restrictions, using the lens of proportionate regulation for the risk the regulatory structure seeks to mitigate.

155. The Working Group in particular will consider minority ownership by non-licensees in law practices, with attention paid to implications for certain areas of law, possible franchise arrangements, and a potential expanded multi-discipline practice scheme to be considered and discussed with the professions. In addition, the Working Group will consider majority ownership by civil society organizations focused on facilitating access to justice and discussed with civil society sectors and with the professions. The Working Group will consider potential alternative business structures in unserved and underserved areas to be considered and discussed with the professions and other interested parties.

156. The Working Group will continue to consider and apply the criteria set above and continue to pay close attention to the potential benefits and costs/risks and rewards of alternatives under consideration.
TERMS OF REFERENCE OF THE LAW SOCIETY OF UPPER CANADA WORKING GROUP ON ALTERNATIVE BUSINESS STRUCTURES

On September 27, 2012, the Working Group reported its Terms of Reference to Convocation. These Terms of Reference provide that the Working Group will

(a) inform itself on developments in Canada and abroad on new and existing alternative legal service delivery models and structures, financing arrangements, and the related regulatory process;

(b) consider these developments in light of regulatory requirements and develop a set of criteria to assess the prioritize these new models and structures. Criteria may include access to the services by the public (access to justice), public protection (risk assessment of various models), and other principles that inform the Law Society’s public interest mandate, including the requirement that standards of professional conduct be proportionate to the significance of the regulatory objectives sought to be realized; and

(c) determine the range of legal service delivery models and financing arrangements that should be explored and examine the existing regulatory constraint s on delivery models and financing arrangements;

(d) create a Work Plan that will include identification of the legal services delivery models and regulatory changes that should be considered by the Law Society for possible implementation based on

(i) an initial assessment of their impacts based on the criteria developed earlier;

(ii) a high level consultation; and

(iii) report the results of its work to Convocation, including, as appropriate, proposals and recommendations for next steps.
