Canadian IT Law Association fonds. -- 1998-2014. -- 1.02 m of textual records, 15 CD-ROMs

Biographical/Sketch/Administrative History

The Canadian IT Law Association, commonly known as IT.Can, was founded in 1997 by a group of Canadian information technology lawyers. Toronto lawyer C. Ian Kyer was the founding president of the association. The association provides a national forum for lawyers to discuss the Canadian aspects of technology law and related subjects.

The objectives of the organization are:

- Offer programs and content to keep pace with how evolving technology shapes law and vice versa
- Create opportunities for the sharing of information within the diverse community of professionals at the intersection of technology and business
- Provide opportunities for relationship building and networking across this diverse community
- Provide a forum for those new to technology legal issues to grow their knowledge in this area
- Seek and encourage collaboration between IT.Can and other relevant professional associations, groups and individuals with compatible interests

The association is governed by an Executive Committee and Board of Directors.
